Secretary Kellogg puts in a well-balanced day as he proposes world-wide treaties to abolish war, and reviews the Army.

"The stars are with the voyager
Wherever he may sail;
The moon is constant to her time,
The sun will never fail."

For the first time since Daedalus put on his rapid wings and "from Minos' realms in flight trusted the sky," airfaring man conquers the North Atlantic in the westward voyage from the Old World to the New. The Bremen, with all well, lands on a tiny island in Belle Isle Strait, between Newfoundland and Labrador, for which the voyagers may thank their lucky stars.

Bandit consumes three ice cream cones before holding up the proprietor and getting away with the cold cash.

There hasn't been a Congress before in the history of the United States that could think up the McNary-Haugen bill, the flood relief monstrosity and the Muscle Shoals nightmare in one session.

"In my youth, father William replied to his son,
"I feared it might injure the brain;
But now that I'm perfectly sure I have none,
Why, I do it again and again."

We always knew it was a myth—
The South is not hostile to Smith.
The welcome Al gets down in Dixie
Is really something very trixy.

DAY IN CONGRESS.
SENATE.
HEFFLIN.
HOUSE.
BLANTON.

Mayor Mackey, of Philadelphia, says that liquor is so plentiful in Washington that the bootlegger beats the milkman to the front porch nearly every morning.

Secretary Wilbur brings to light two more warships that have a ladies' auxiliary.

Hans and Fritz, here is to you,
Winging westward through the blue;
May we give you two the cue—
'Twas the Shamrock pulled you through!

Maj. Hesse also comes through and although severely blighted makes a safe landing in the Commissioners' office.

With the temperature in Boston soaring 'way up to 40 in the shade no wonder Wilbur wits.

As "Farthest South" North Carolina is to Al Smith what the Arctic is to Commander Byrd, but we suspect that before the Governor completes his travels of 1928 he will have gone fishing 'way down upon the Svanee River.

Is the organization described by a Federal judge in Pittsburgh as unlawful and "destructive of the rights and liberties of the people," and coming into court with "filthy hands" the Soviet government of Russia, the I. W. W., the Communist party, or the Amalgamated Bomb Brigade of Chicago? Not at all—he's applying a definition to that 100 per cent American order the Sainted and Sheeted. The Ku Klux Klan is unhooded proper.

Washington State instructs for Al Smith—under the unit rule. When the Governor decides to be a candidate he may pick up a few delegates.

The truth of the matter is that no Democrat has so gripped the attention of the American people since Andrew Jackson as the Governor of New York. They turned Andy down once, you'll remember—and then the next time! What the common people of America did to those who turned him down everybody remembers, and all time will be able to recall.

Tom Hefflin roars in the Senate against the inevitable like a titmouse chirping in a cyclone.

What we want to hear is Mr. Fess keynoting on the farm bill veto before a bunch of hard-boiled Senators and Congressmen who put McNary-Haugenism over.

The up-to-date and modern Senate passes the bill for a toll bridge across the Potomac just below Great Falls and we expect any day now to hear that it has a resolution requiring ox carts and stage coaches to carry tail lights.

Ways and Means committee favors making it easier for Austria to raise a loan in America than it is to pay the old one.

The Socialist Party, which opens its national convention in New York is making a great mistake in not adopting the Antislavery League's policy of abandoning parties for the boring-from-within system.

4 NATIONS INVITED TO CONFER WITH U.S. AND FRANCE ON WAR.

Borah Calls the Proposed Treaty an Aid to All Peace Plans.

ABOLITION SOUGHT OF WORLD CONFLICTS

Other Countries to Be Permitted to Join, Kellogg Declares in Note Sent.

(Associated Press.)
Negotiations for a world-wide treaty solemnly renouncing war in favor of the Pacific settlement of international controversies, were initiated yesterday when Secretary Kellogg invited the British, German, Italian and Japanese governments to join France and the United States in agreeing upon and signing a pact to that end.

It is the first time in history that the United States has embarked upon so extensive a project for the promotion of world peace. It has the sanction of President Coolidge and the State Department is confident of its ultimate success.

Other Nations Can Join.
The United States is of the opinion that Secretary Kellogg in offering his draft treaty to the four foreign ministers for their consideration and comment, that every nation in the world can, with a proper regard for its own interests, as well as for the interests of the entire family of nations, join in such a treaty.

The four governments were asked by Mr. Kellogg whether they were in a position to give favorable consideration to the conclusion of a treaty such as that submitted and, if not, what specific modifications in the text would be acceptable to them. At the same time he announced that so far as the United States is concerned no effort would be spared to find a solution for any technical difficulties which might arise in the course of the negotiations.

Discussed Since December.
Discussions between the United States and France on the proposed treaty have been going on since last December and the correspondence which clearly sets forth the views of the two governments, was placed in the hands of the other four foreign ministers yesterday in accordance with an agreement between Mr. Briand and Secretary Kellogg.

France is not in any way committed to approval of the draft treaty submitted, Secretary Kellogg pointed out and is entirely free to make such further observations on the treaty or of the correspondence with the United States as may be deemed advisable or appropriate. Such observations would be addressed not only to the United States but to the four powers invited yesterday. By thus enlarging the field of negotiations, Secretary Kellogg says it is made possible for all six governments to fully explore the entire situation.

Borah is Gratiified.
Gratification that the proposal to renounce war has been sent to leading nations and made open to all nations was expressed last night by Senator Borah (Republican), Idaho, chairman of the foreign relations committee. He declared this treaty was in aid of all plans for peace and would strengthen every treaty of conciliation in arbitration.

"I am greatly gratified that the proposal to renounce war now goes to the leading nations and is open to all nations," Senator Borah said. "War is as

Aldrich Estate Suit Against Nurse Ended
New York, April 13 (A.P.)—The suit of Mrs. Jeanette T. Aldrich to break the will of her late husband, Sherwood Aldrich, vice president of the Nevada Consolidated Copper Co., who left the bulk of his $1,000,000 estate to his nurse, has been settled out of court. It was disclosed in Surrogate's Court today.

Mrs. Aldrich's suit, claiming that the will was not her husband's "free and voluntary act" and charging fraud and undue influence, was dismissed today. Mr. Aldrich died last July. The will made provision for an income of $2,500 for his mother, and left the entire balance to Ethel M. Sears, his nurse, formerly of Brantford, Ontario.

Flying Record Set, Despite Snowstorm

St. Paul, Minn., April 13 (A.P.)—Forced down by a blinding snow storm Gene Shank landed his 90-horsepower biplane at 9:18 a. m. here today, after establishing a world's record for sustained flight of a light airplane as shown in records available here. He was in the air 14 hours and 28 minutes, beating the mark of 12 hours 38 minutes made by Harry Brooks in a small Ford plane in a flight from Detroit to Ft. Worth, Fla. Brooks later was killed.

When Shank took the air at 6:50 p. m. yesterday, ideal weather prevailed, but early today snow began to fall.

POTOMAC TOLL BRIDGE BILL PASSED BY SENATE

Measure for Year-Round Saturday Half Holiday Also Is Approved.

SENTENCES IN KIDNAPING

The Swanson-Moore bill authorizing the construction of a $1,000,000 toll bridge across the Potomac River just below Great Falls was passed by the Senate yesterday. It already had passed the House, and it now goes to the White House for the President's signature.

Three other local bills were passed and sent to the House, as follows: The Capper bill authorizing an appropriation of $35,000 for the establishment of a temporary farmers' market behind the present Center Market.

The Capper bill prescribing drastic penalties for kidnapping in the District of Columbia was passed by the House yesterday. The Jones bill granting a Saturday half-holiday the year round to all laborers, helpers, skilled and semi-skilled workmen in the Government service, with the exception of those in the Government Printing Office and the Postoffice Department.

The bridge bill was the only one that precipitated debate. Senator Norris (Republican), of Nebraska, previously had introduced an amendment to strike out everything in the bill but the enacting clause and then to graft on to it what virtually amounted to his old bill providing for a Federal water power project at Great Falls.

When the bill was reached yesterday, Senator Swanson (Democrat), of Virginia, appealed to Norris to withdraw his amendment, saying that it would kill the bill. Norris turned to Senator Capper (Republican), of Kansas, chairman of the Senate District committee, and asked him if the committee was going to report out his bill providing a Federal power plant at Great Falls. Capper said that such action was doubtful.

Senator Glass (Democrat), of Virginia, a member of the District committee, told Norris that he would insist that the committee take action on his bill. Whereupon Norris withdrew his amendment to the bridge bill and permitted it to pass.

The bill authorizes the Great Falls Bridge Co. to construct and maintain

Lieut. Hunting Charged With Reckless Flying

San Antonio, Tex., April 13 (A.P.)—Accused of having forced an automobile into a ditch near Laredo, Tex., endangering the lives of the three occupants of the car, Lieut. Lloyd E. Hunting, Kelly field aviator, today was charged with reckless flying in violation of Army service regulations.

The motorists charged Lieut. Hunting flew toward them at a low altitude, forcing their car off the road. He will be tried before the headquarters court-martial next week.

City Heads Clear Hesse Of Charges Blanton Made

Commissioners Write Chairman Gibson That Review of Testimony Shows Nothing That Impeaches Major's Efficiency and Courage.

After considering for some weeks the assaults made upon the reputation of Maj. Edwin B. Hesse, superintendent of police, by Representative Thomas L. Blanton, the District Commissioners yesterday gave the police chief a complete clean bill of health. They said officially that no matters had been brought to their attention warranting action against Maj. Hesse, and added that he is in their opinion possessed of ability, fidelity and courage.

This reply to Blanton's charges was contained in a letter to Representative E. W. Gibson, chairman of the Gibson subcommittee, signed by Proctor L. Dougherty, as chairman of the Board of District Commissioners.

Blanton's accusations, and such evidence as he had, were developed before the Gibson subcommittee and a voluminous transcript of the proceedings was read by Commissioner Sidney F.

JUDGE CALLS KLAN LAWLESS, THROWING SUIT OUT OF COURT

Evans Held Responsible for Bloodshed at Carnegie Riot.

CHARGES OF CRUELTY DECLARED SUSTAINED

High Officials Are Asserted to Have Ordered or Sanctioned Brutal Punishment.

Pittsburgh, Pa., April 13 (A.P.)—The suit of the Ku Klux Klan for an injunction against five former members was dismissed in Federal court here this afternoon by Judge W. H. S. Thomson, who placed the cost upon the plaintiffs.

Part of the court's opinion said that members of "this unlawful organization, so destructive of the rights and liberties of the people, have come in vain asking this court of equity for injunctive or other relief. They come with filthy hands and can get no assistance here."

"Plaintiffs' prayer for relief is denied and the bill is dismissed at the cost of the plaintiffs."

Of the Carnegie (Pa.) riot in 1923, Judge Thomson said that Hiram W. Evans, imperial wizard of the Klan, was "directly responsible for the riot and bloodshed which ensued."

Trials Held by Klan.
The evidence disclosed, the court held, that in the State of Texas men were brought before the Klan, tried and convicted and in some instances subjected to brutal beatings, while in others they were condemned to die and buried at the stake.

Judge Thomson found that Evans was aware of the fact that civil authorities had refused a permit for the Carnegie parade but that in defiance of this, and in utter disregard of the consequences, Evans gave the order to march, resulting in the riot in which one man was killed, others wounded and others beaten.

The judge further held that "the evidence in this case establishes conclusively that gross violations of the law were committed by the plaintiffs within the Western District of Pennsylvania."

Judge Thomson then reviewed testimony which he said showed that Klansmen unlawfully attacked a negro in Beaver County, Pa., under orders of S. D. Rich, then grand dragon, suspended him from a tree with a rope and kicked and abused him. He said that Richard had ordered the kidnapping of a little girl in Pittsburgh in June, 1923, and that she was kidnapped and that to date no one knows whether "she is alive or dead."

Despotic Rule Set Up.

Continuing, the opinion said "that in violation of its charter and in violation of its own constitution, it (the Klan) has established and is maintaining a form of despotic rule which is being operated in secret, under the disguise of a law."

Soldier for 13 Years Revealed as Woman

Mexico City, April 13 (A.P.)—The identity of an Indian woman, calling herself Jose Burgos Brito and posing as a man for thirteen years as a private in the Mexican army, during which she fought in "many battles," was revealed today when "Brito" killed another soldier in a barroom brawl.

Her sex was discovered only when she was taken to jail and a doctor examined her. Even then she fought against being transferred to the women's ward, tore up women's clothes given to her, proclaimed herself "muy hombre" and offered to fight the entire prison staff to prove her prowess. She finally was forcibly subdued and locked up with women prisoners.

Princess Is Fined $1 ON "INSULT" CHARGE

Outgrowth of Boat Ride by U. S. Woman With Husband of Defendant.

Stamboul, Turkey, April 13 (A.P.)—The moonlight ride on the Bosphorus four years ago of Mme. Salda, formerly Mrs. John D. Speckles, Jr., and the husband of Princess Chivekier, of Egypt, was given its fifth airing in court today. The penal court fined the princess five liras (about $1) on a charge of insulting Mme. Salda, but suspended the fine in view of the extenuating circumstances of the moonlight boat trip.

Mme. Salda is a former Kansas farm girl. She was divorced from Mr. Prince Speckles.

Princess Chivekier is a former wife of King Fuad of Egypt, but when the boat trip occurred she was the spouse of Speckles and subsequently married Selim Bey. She later sued him for divorce for his alleged indiscretion in taking that excursion with the American-born wife of Prince Chakir.

The Egyptian princess originally was fined ten Turkish pounds for insulting the American, but appealed. This appeal upheld the fine, but threw out the assault charge.

GIRL STOWAWAY CASE INVOLVES MORE SHIPS

Destroyers Williamson and Brooks Ordered to Port in Scandal Inquiry.

15-YEAR-OLD TELLS TALE

Two more Navy destroyers, the Brooks and Williamson, were brought into the Navy Department's investigation yesterday, resulting from the finding of five girl stowaways on vessels leaving New Orleans and St. Petersburg, Fla. Wednesday, making six ships involved in the affair.

The department announced yesterday that the Brooks and Williamson had been ordered to proceed to Mayport, Fla., in connection with the court of inquiry dealing with the presence of a 15-year-old girl aboard the destroyer Billingsley at sea. On completion of examination of witnesses aboard the Williamson and Brooks the destroyers will continue to New York.

Another court of inquiry is now meeting at Key West, Fla., aboard the cruiser Dobbin, which, with the Concord and Sands, also is involved in the matter. It was indicated that severe punishment would be administered to persons found guilty of the charge which probably will be carrying a civilian aboard a naval vessel without orders, or possibly a more serious one.

Mayport, Fla., April 13 (A.P.)—Declaring she was "persuaded" to go aboard the U. S. destroyer Billingsley, but that she "wanted to go," Cynthia Albert Pool, 15-year-old St. Petersburg girl, testified today at a naval court of inquiry hearing charges against Seaman

$24,000,000 in Gold Arrives at Havre

Havre, France, April 13 (A.P.)—The steamships Ile de France and Rochambeau arrived here simultaneously bringing $24,000,000 in gold for the Bank of France. This was the heaviest shipment since the present eastward movement of the metal began.

The gold was in nearly 600 barrels and was shipped to Paris immediately under a strong escort.

WASHINGTON INSTRUCTS DELEGATION FOR SMITH

Michigan County Conventions Are Unanimous for New York Governor.

SOLID STATE VOTE SEEN

Spokane, Wash., April 13 (A.P.)—The Washington Democratic State convention tonight instructed its delegates to the national convention to cast their ballots as a unit for the nomination of Gov. Al Smith for President.

The keynote address was delivered by A. Scott Bullitt, of Seattle, leader of the party ticket two years ago as a candidate for United States senator. Much of his speech was devoted to an arraignment of the administration of Hartley Republican, George F. Christensen, of Stevenson, was unanimously reelected national committeeman. The convention adopted unanimously a slate of eight delegates at large proposed from the floor, each with half a vote in the convention at Houston. They are:

U. S. Senator C. C. Dill, of Spokane; A. Scott Bullitt, of Seattle; Hugh Todd, of Seattle; Robert Smith, of Palouse; Dr. Margaret Burgund, of Spokane; Mrs. Nellie Hurd, of Seattle; Charles Rantz, of Bellingham; and Robert E. Evans, of Tacoma.

The motion to instruct the delegation for Smith, offered by Todd, was adopted only after a roll call vote, which showed 358 votes in favor of the motion and 131 opposed. A subsequent motion to instruct the delegation to vote as a unit on all questions before the national convention carried by a viva voce vote.

The vote on the Smith instruction was preceded by several speeches for and against it. Roy K. Roadruck, president of the delegation, was one of the speakers.

WILBUR CLEARS BRUMBY IN S-4 SALVAGING WORK

Nothing in Conduct Considered Other Than Commendable, Says Secretary.

BACKS SUBMARINE CHIEF

There is nothing in the conduct of Rear Admiral Frank H. Brumby in connection with the rescue and salvage operations of the submarine S-4 which is considered blameworthy or other than commendable," according to a final report issued yesterday by Secretary of the Navy Wilbur on the investigation into the submarine tragedy.

In addition to reversing the earlier report of the board of inquiry, which investigated the disaster in regard to Admiral Brumby, Secretary Wilbur's statement declared that the proof in this case, in so far as it affects Lieut. Comdr. Roy K. Jones, skipper of the submarine, "is wholly insufficient to justify a finding of guilt."

The inquiry board had earlier found that Commander Jones was equally blameable with the commander of the Coast Guard cutter Paulding for the collision which resulted in the sinking of the Navy craft.

Speaking of Admiral Brumby's part in the operations of which he had charge, Wilbur's statement said "under all the circumstances any errors or oversights or failures in his testimony (before the board of inquiry) are insufficient to overcome his splendid

PLANE MAY BE FLOWN NORTH TO RESCUE TRIO

Sealing Steamer Might Be Required to Reach Landing Spot, Is View.

By SIR PATRICK M'GRATH, (Correspondent of The Washington Post and the New York Herald-Tribune.)

St. John's, N. F., April 13.—The German and Irish airmen attempting the transatlantic flight landed this afternoon at Greenly Island, Canadian Labrador, according to a wireless message from the Marconi operator, W. F. Barrett, at Point Amour, a few miles from the landing place.

This is near the western end of Belle Isle Strait, which whole region is at present inaccessible owing to ice floes which encompass the northern region every winter.

It is assumed here that the machine was driven off its course by bad weather, landing there because they lacked further fuel.

Region Sparingly Settled.

No fuel being obtainable in that region, and the machine being damaged, the airmen must remain there until rescued by steamer from here, if this course is decided on, or travel by dog team westward along the Labrador coast until they reach a point where a steamer can pick them up.

The whole territory is very sparsely settled with small fishing villages, and the only communication is a wireless station operating a few hours daily, wherefore no details are obtainable tonight.

Crew of Three Men Safe.

(Associated Press.)

Apparently fully authenticated reports announce the German monoplane Bremen and her German-Irish crew have beaten that aviation hoodoo—a nonstop westward flight of the Atlantic.

They did not completely achieve their announced objective—"Mitchel field or heaven"—but they tied the eastern and western shores in a 34-hour jump from Ireland to Labrador, assert dispatches from several reliable sources.

Slightly damaged in a forced descent, the Bremen was said to rest under the sheer rock cliffs of Greenly Island, a little "dot" on the map marking the southern tip of Labrador.

Her crew of three—Baron von Huenefeld, Capt. Koehl and Col. Fitzmaurice—unharméd by the long, arduous, almost fatal flight from Baldonnel Field, were guests of the island lighthouse keeper.

Landed About Noon Yesterday.

The plane landed about noon yesterday, all reports agree, but because of the isolation of the spot, no news reached the outside world until nearly seven hours later. It came in a wireless message from Point Amour, Labrador, apparently relayed there by courier, and read:

"German plane landed Greenly Island noon. Slightly damaged. Crew well."

First report that the voyagers had come down 400 miles north of their plotted course, came from the Marconi operator at Point Amour, some 10 miles from Greenly Island. It was followed quickly by a dispatch from the Canadian government station at Lousburg, Nova Scotia.

Further apparent confirmation came with the interception of a dispatch addressed to the London Times, supposedly signed by one of the Bremen's crew, announcing their safety. Radio circles, after checking, found the dispatch had been filed "through the station nearest the point of landing."

Hope Almost Abandoned.
Hope for the Bremen and her intrepid crew of three had almost been abandoned last night.

There was a ray of hope yesterday morning when the Canadian press reported that Capt. Barkhouse of the Canadian cutter Arras had sighted a monoplane over Kingsport, Nova Scotia, traveling in the direction of Cape Cod. The plane was high in the air, and he could not distinguish its markings. As no Canadian planes were known to be in the vicinity at the time of sighting—9:30 a. m.—the captain, an experienced

SMITH IS CHEERED BY GREAT THROUGHS AS VACATION BEGINS

Thousands Greet Governor Aboard Train on Way to Baltimore.

ASKS RURAL-SPOKESMAN "WHERE WAS TAMMANY?"

Says New York Should Have Two State Executives; Lauds South's Highways.

Ashville, N. C., April 13 (A.P.).—Gov. Smith of New York arrived here today for a vacation, his first in the South. He detrained at Baltimore station in the suburbs, where he was greeted by several thousand persons and after a brief welcoming ceremony went to Baltimore Forest Country Club, which will be his headquarters here.

In high spirits over the prospect of a rest after the strenuous legislative session at Albany Smith found that elaborate arrangements had been made for his reception and comfort. Hearing the call of Mayor Gallatin Roberts and E. N. Lyda, chairman of the board of county commissioners, citizens of Asheville and surrounding country turned out to extend a Southern welcome in such numbers that they thronged the plaza nearby.

The governor's train traveled through western North Carolina. Crowds of men, women and children anxious to get a glimpse of him were at every station. Those at a number of points found that the Democratic presidential candidate is a late riser and failed to see him.

Met by Village Band.

At Old Port, however, a village band and the cheers of a group of admirers brought Gov. Smith to the rear platform of his special car. He heard a speech of welcome from the crowd's spokesman, George Sandlin, and remarked that he could not compete with such oratory.

Sandlin reviewed the early story of Old Port, recalling various Indian tribes that once had roamed the neighborhood. This brought from the governor the reply: "Where was Tammany in those days?" and that quip in turn brought "Three cheers for Tammany" from the crowd.

Sandlin, who is station master at Old Port, told the governor that in his community there were no persons of Smith's religious faith; that Baptists, Methodists, Presbyterians, Free Thinkers, and—mostly sinners. But, added, "there are no bigots or idiots and no intolerance."

Gov. Smith, who left New York yesterday afternoon, arrived here in company with Senator Gerry of Rhode Island, and James J. Flordan, William F. Kenny and William R. Todd, personal friends. He plans to play golf here, and has passed word that politics are taboo.

Breaks Through Ropes.

The crowd on the plaza was held back by ropes, but when Gov. Smith's automobile came to a stop, the people broke through and crowded round him. Looking around with a broad smile he remarked as he held up his hat, "So I wouldn't disappoint you, I brought my bowler derby with me."

"This is my first visit to North Carolina," the governor went on, "the first time in my life I have been to the South. In my long and busy career I have never had time to do much traveling around—unless it was to attend a national convention. In fact, if it hadn't been for the national conventions I doubt if I'd ever got out of my native State of New York."

"Last June I went to Canada for the first time. I went up there to meet the Prince of Wales and to participate with him in the official opening of the International Peace Bridge."

"My job in New York is a working man's job. It means long hours and night and day performances. As a matter of fact, we need two governors in New York, one to attend to the business and government details and the other to do the traveling around, off to the laying of corner stones, christenings and such functions and to attend the dinners and Rotary Club and civic luncheons. I think, if it is true that this governor should be supplied with plenty of evening clothes and a pass on all the railroads."

"During 1927 I received so many invitations and appeals to attend social and public functions that I decided to suggest an amendment to the original plan about free railroad passes and propose that this governor number two be furnished an airplane. The New York Herald only run miles a minute and this governor could never hope to make all of his appointments at such a low speed."

"I left New York yesterday for a vacation after seven months of rather strenuous work. I was awakened this morning by some of my friends in Dixie with welcoming greetings and began for the first day of my vacation."

"All my life I have enjoyed seeing people, meeting people and talking to them. I am highly honored by this cordial reception. I feel already that I'm going to have a wonderful time down here in your midst."

"Under the tutelage of Senator Gerry I have been learning much about North Carolina on my way down. Her highways are superb. I see that you're building the same kind of roads in this State that we've been building in New York. Such highways as I've seen are proof of great progress. I never expected to see in a mountain resort community so much business and industrial development."

"I am satisfied I'm going to enjoy myself while I'm here. I'm pleased and

Smith Spending Large Sums, Hefflin Charges

(Associated Press.)

Outmaneuvering Senate leaders who sought to delay his speech, Senator Hefflin, of Alabama, made a new attack yesterday on Gov. Alfred E. Smith of New York and brought into the range of his fire Mayor James E. Walker of New York City. The Alabama charged that the New York Governor and candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination is the head of "the Roman Catholic political machine in America," and asserted that the Smith campaign fund was "the largest and most corrupt ever used."

Major Walker was declared by Hefflin to be "a smooth artist, the slickest cat in the pond."

The Alabama senator urged Senator Borah (Republican), Idaho, to introduce a new resolution for investigation of campaign expenditures, and said that Mayor Walker should be the first witness called, but he added that all of the "Tammanyites" should be examined by the Senate committee he would have created.

Steak Makes Reply.

Hefflin charged and Senator Steck (Democrat), Iowa, vigorously denied that the Smith forces had used huge sums in Iowa in the contest against Edwin T. Meredith for the U. S. delegation to the Democratic national convention at Houston.

Asserting that Arkansas is 10 to 1 against Smith, although the State is claimed for him, Hefflin warned that if the Arkansas delegation was delivered to "the anointed of the Pope" there would be more political tomfooleries around here than you have even seen."

The claim that Oklahoma is for Smith was described by Hefflin as "choking." He also said that James M. Thompson, publisher of the New Orleans Item, had been in Washington, as he understood, "trying to get a vote in Louisiana, but the people may express themselves and say that the Louisiana delegation is for Smith."

Makes Two Stars.

Hefflin made two stars before he finally was permitted to get under way. He obtained the floor immediately after the Senate convened, but Senator Curtis, of Kansas, the Republican leader, took him off his feet on a point of order.

The Alabamian was up again in a few minutes and that time Vice President Dawes ruled he was entitled to speak. Hefflin, Senator Curtis tried to shut him off.

Explaining that the Senate desired to act on the naval appropriation bill, the Republican leader suggested that Hefflin's speech could be made some other day. Hefflin disagreed with him and inquired what he had to say about it. "I am not nervous," Curtis replied, adding that he had "no interest in anything that the senator from Alabama may say."

House Bloc to Fight For Haugen Farm Bill

(Associated Press.)

A move will be initiated today to have the House, when it turns to the consideration of the farm relief question, take up the Haugen farm bill as a substitute for the McNary measure passed Thursday by the Senate. Unlike a year ago, when the House rejected the McNary bill, the House group now feels that the Haugen measure is the bill that should be enacted.

Both Chairman Haugen and Representative Turner, of Oregon, a Republican, on the House agriculture committee, said yesterday that they favored the House bill in preference to that approved by the Senate. The McNary measure yesterday formally was reported to the House by the Senate and referred to the House of Agriculture committee.

Verdict for $30,000 Against Dentist Holds

A verdict for $30,000 damages, one of the largest ever returned by a circuit court jury in this jurisdiction, was allowed to stand yesterday by Justice McCall in the case of Dr. Edmund L. Finch, a dentist, who was sued by the International Peace Bridge Commission for a new trial filed by Dr. Clarence H. Howland, dentist, 2412 Pennsylvania Avenue, N. E., who was assessed this amount in favor of Edmund L. Finch. The dentist noted an appeal.

Through Attorneys Lambert, Yeatman & Schwartz Plaintiff Finch charged that he took care in Dr. Howland's office to have the tooth he had filled, and it is alleged, the filling dropped into Finch's lung because of the alleged failure of the dentist to pack the throat of his patient. An abscess of the lung developed and caused serious complications and permanent injuries. It was charged.

Republican Women's Club Plans Changes

The executive board of the Republican Women's Club of the District, meeting last night at the home of Mrs. Edward A. Hartman, newly elected president, voted to reclassify the membership into active, associate and sustaining members.

The board also voted to accept the invitation of Mrs. Dwight F. Davis, wife of the Secretary of War, to hold the May 7 meeting at the home of Mrs. Davis. Guests at the next meeting will be members of the Women's Republican clubs of Virginia and Maryland.

Richard Dix Reported In Critical Condition

Los Angeles, Calif., April 13 (A.P.).—As a result of serious lung and kidney conditions following an operation for appendicitis, Richard Dix, the film actor, was given only an even chance of recovery tonight by his physicians. The actor spent a restless night and today his doctors held a hurried consultation.

Dix had been said to be recovering splendidly from the operation performed Wednesday until the complications arose.

Kramer, charged with secreting her on the vessel.

The court of inquiry convened today after the Billingsley had been ordered back to this port when the girl's presence aboard was discovered. Kramer was placed in irons.

Cynthia said she would have "jumped overboard" had she known her father was coming here to return her to St. Petersburg. Her father, who started the investigation which resulted in the girl's discovery, was expected here during the day.

The girl spent last night locked in the room of a boarding house. She is in the custody of J. L. Gavagan, justice of the peace, of St. Petersburg, who was connected with the case by Cynthia today when she said the woman was also planning to stow away on the Billingsley, leaving her husband. She was prevented, Cynthia said, when the husband arrived at the dock just before his wife boarded the destroyer.

CAPITAL RESIDENTS NOT WANTED TO HEAD PEN WOMEN LEAGUE

Mrs. E. N. Dingley, Mrs. Busch and Mrs. Heffebower Named for Presidency.

RESULTS OF ELECTION WILL BE GIVEN TODAY

Delegates to National Convention Visit Coolidge at White House.

Nominations of national officers, a visit to President Coolidge and preparations for the annual authors' breakfast and election today occupied the attention of the delegates to the biennial convention of the National League of American Pen Women at the Willard Hotel yesterday. The convention will close tomorrow.

The delegates last night attended a reception given in their honor by the District of Columbia League at the clubhouse of the local league, 1108 Sixteenth street northwest. Active campaigning for the candidates was conducted over the punch bowl and in little groups around the room.

In the receiving line were Mrs. Anita Maris Boggs, president of the local league; Miss Alice Hutchins Drake, first vice president; Miss Elizabeth Barnes, second vice president; Mrs. Richard Gasch, recording secretary; Miss Willard Howe, corresponding secretary; Miss Alice Heaven, historian; Miss Helen Colburn, librarian; Mrs. Charles W. Allen, registrar; Miss Bertha Frances Wolfe, parliamentarian; Mrs. John Francis Steele, auditor; and Miss Patricia Poe Bennett, chairman of public relations, all officers of the local league.

The three candidates nominated for the office of national president for term of two years were Mrs. Bonnie Busch, of Miami, Fla., formerly of Washington; Mrs. Edward Nelson Dingley, of Washington; and Mrs. Clara Keck Heffebower, of Cincinnati. It is expected the result of the election will be announced this morning.

Two Nominated for Vice President.

Nominees for first vice president are Dr. Mary Meek Atkinson and Harriet H. Locher, both of Washington; second vice president, unopposed, Alice Ames Wins, of Minneapolis; third vice president, unopposed, Katharine H. Chapman, of Alabama, and Mme. Olga Samoroff, Pennsylvania; fourth vice president, unopposed, Mrs. Steel, Pennsylvania, and Jessie Wilder New York; fifth vice president, unopposed, Bernice Downing, California; recording secretary, Mrs. Richard Gasch and Mrs. Harriet E. N. Chace, both of Washington; corresponding secretary, Frances W. Diehl, Pennsylvania; and Marie C. Reddy, Washington; treasurer, Ella O. Howard, of Virginia; and Mrs. E. F. Stevenson, all of Washington; auditor, Mrs. Margaret S. Carruth, Texas, and Mrs. Agnes Newman, of Washington.

Other nominations were: Librarian, Mrs. Elizabeth Seymour Zimmerman, of Maryland; historian, Miss Willard Howe, Washington; Rose Lovell, Central New York; and Mrs. E. F. Stevenson, of Washington. Mrs. E. F. Stevenson, of Washington, was elected to the office of local president of the local league.

Following the nominations the delegates were received at the White House by President Coolidge shortly after noon. A number of delegates were disappointed when it was found that they were not to be present at the White House with the officers of the league. The delegates were photographed with the President after the reception. A poetry reading given by the delegates, presided over by the President, was held in the afternoon. Mrs. May Lowell Holington, national chairman of poetry, presided.

At the business session, the league changed its by-laws to reduce the ratio of delegates. The ratio was changed from one delegate for every ten members to one delegate for every fifteen, with a minimum allowance of five for each chapter.

The annual authors' breakfast will be held at noon today at the Willard Hotel. Mrs. Grace Thompson Seton, retiring national president, will be toastmaster.

Mrs. Coolidge Is Patroness.

The list of patronesses is headed by Mrs. Coolidge and includes the wives of members of the Cabinet and the Diplomatic Corps, wives of members of Congress and other distinguished women. Speakers will be Katherine H. Finch, president of the Society of American Women Painters; Dr. Cloyd H. Marvin, president of the American Psychological Association; Joseph Lippincott, president of the J. P. Lippincott Co., Philadelphia publishers; and Senator Arthur Capper, from Kansas.

Guests who will be seated at the speakers' table will be Hewitt H. Howland, editor of Century Magazine; Maj. Gen. Charles F. Sumner, chief of staff of the Army; Angela Morgan, Princess Cantacuzene, Bonnie Busch, Miriam Dingley, Dr. Mary Meek Atkinson, Mrs. Richard Gasch, Katherine Hopkins Chapman and Isabella G. Fleck.

SENATE VOTES NAVY PERSONNEL INCREASE

Sanctions Enlistments Up to 86,000 Men; Final Action on Bill Deferred.

(Associated Press.)

After approving an increase in the Navy enlisted personnel from 83,250 to 86,000, the Senate yesterday deferred final action on the naval appropriation bill in the face of a fight by the group of senators who have been opposing the use of American marines in Nicaragua.

These senators, led by Senator Norris, of Nebraska, a leader of the Republican independents, will undertake today to have inserted in the bill a provision that none of the funds for the Marine Corps can be used to maintain American marines in foreign lands for the purpose of supervising elections.

Immediately after Chairman Hale, of the naval committee, began his explanation of the bill, Senator Norris brought up the Nicaraguan question, inquiring whether under the measure the marines could be maintained in foreign countries to supervise elections.

"There is no specific provision," Senator Hale said. "The bill merely appropriates funds for the maintenance of the marines no matter where they may be stationed."

PROSECUTOR ENDS TESTIMONY IN CASE AGAINST SINCLAIR

Court to Rule on Admitting $25,000 Payment to Fall on Monday.

EVIDENCE ON LEASE TO DOHNEY DISPUTED

13-Year-Old Daughter of Oil Magnate Among Spectators at Trial.

(Associated Press.)

Climaxing its headlong rush to get its conspiracy case against Harry F. Sinclair before the jury, the Government rested yesterday after the defense had presented—for the time at least—the testimony of the alleged conspirators. The prosecution considers highly important.

Two questions were taken under consideration by Justice Jennings Bailey, for decision on Monday. These dealt with $25,000 in Liberty bonds which Sinclair gave Albert B. Fall when the latter was in the office of the U. S. Hills lease fall gave E. L. Dohney. The court said he was inclined to exclude this evidence, but withheld a ruling on both issues until the resumption of the trial on Monday.

Owen J. Roberts, special Government counsel, contended that the Liberty bond transaction, although it took place after the date set in the indictment as the termination of the alleged conspiracy, showed the "color" and the secrecy of the relations between Fall and Sinclair. Martin W. Littleton, for the defense, contended that the testimony was not germane because the acts which it covered took place "long after" the period covered in the indictment.

Dohney Charge Voided.

The bribery indictment against Edward L. Dohney, Jr., growing out of his delivery in a "little black catch" of $100,000 from his father to Fall, then Secretary of the Interior, was nolle prossed by Roberts' request for a mistrial. This was for the purpose, Roberts said, of avoiding the bringing of the younger Dohney to Washington to testify under oath.

Fall, who is spending a week-end at his home in New York, and his mother here. Sitting with her in the front of the courtroom were Sinclair's mother, Mrs. Mary F. Fall, and his sister, Mrs. E. L. Dohney.

Defense counsel objected to the bringing up of the E. L. Hills lease in any way on the ground that it was irrelevant to the conspiracy charge against Sinclair. The court ruling on this question will determine whether Dohney will take the stand.

For nearly an hour yesterday morning supplementary to the Teapot Dome lease given Sinclair by Fall, covering the construction of coastal storage tanks for naval oil.

Sinclair's Daughter Attends.

Among the spectators yesterday was Sinclair's 13-year-old daughter, Virginia, who is spending a week-end at her home in New York, and her mother here. Sitting with her in the front of the courtroom were Sinclair's mother, Mrs. Mary F. Fall, and his sister, Mrs. E. L. Dohney.

Upon the entry of the jury at the outset of the trial, the Government observed them closely. The former carried a newspaper clipping listing the jurors, to which he referred in his closing argument.

Defense counsel had called their witnesses for Monday, and therefore were not prepared to begin their case yesterday afternoon. They are expected to conclude within a week.

Defense to Call Robinson.

George P. Hoover and Littleton said that they plan an exhaustive development of the general leasing policy of the business, and the Interior Department prior to the Teapot Dome case. They also will go into the details of that lease to Sinclair, which they say will show that the negotiations were open and that their client did not know of efforts of others to obtain leases on the naval oil reserve. One exception, they said, was the effort of John C. Shaffer, Chicago publisher, to whom Sinclair agreed to sell the lease of the Teapot Dome for development.

The first defense witnesses will be Robert C. Robinson, a retired, and Dr. H. Foster Bain, head of the American Institute of Mining and Metallurgy, and a Government geologist. Robinson was called to the stand by the defense yesterday.

Cunningham Case Before Grand Jury

The contempt case against Thomas W. Cunningham, sheriff of Philadelphia County, Pa., who refused to tell the Senate committee which was investigating the election of William S. Vare as the actual source of a $50,000 contribution made by him to the Vare campaign fund, was presented to the Federal grand jury yesterday by Assistant District Attorney Joseph V. Connelley under instructions from District Attorney Leo A. Rover.

Hicklin Yates, secretary to Senator James A. Reed, was the only witness to appear at the hearing. The case against Cunningham is documentary. Cunningham did tell the committee that he furnished the money himself, but refused to reveal how and where he got it. An indictment is expected next week.

Two Political Witnesses Called by Oil Committee

(Associated Press.)

More newly developed testimony in the Senate investigation of the Liberty bond profits of the Continental Trading Co.

Subpoenas were issued for two additional witnesses, whose names were withheld although the summons had been served and an acknowledgment received. Committee members said the two witnesses were expected to give "important testimony" concerning both the political aspects of the case and the manner in which the Government was intended that it was because of the importance of their testimony that their names were withheld as it was apprehended that they might be frightened by the publicity of the hearing.

Members of the committee said their names would not be made known until they were called to the stand at the opening of the inquiry next Tuesday at which time three other witnesses are to be heard—Thomas W. Miller, former alien property custodian, and Harry M. Blair and Claudius H. Upton, of New York, formerly connected with the Republican National committee organization.

Before consenting to appear, Miller, who is under a permanent sentence for conspiracy to defraud the Government, demanded that a formal subpoena be served upon him. This was done at his home in Wilmington, Del., by a deputy United States marshal.

Baby Falls to Alley From Porch of Home

While playing on the second floor back porch of her home at 3825 Georgia avenue northwest yesterday afternoon, Gloria Caruso, 15 months old, fell into the alley below and was taken in a serious condition to Emergency Hospital in an ambulance.

The child was treated by Dr. S. Adler.

Citizens' Council Meet Commissioners

The new citizens' advisory council called yesterday on the District Commissioners to pay its respects. In lieu of the corresponding function of former years, prolonged by the administration of an unofficial oath of office, the visit was brief. After six minutes District L. Dougherty, president of the Citizens' Board of Commissioners, said: "I am sorry, gentlemen, but the Commissioners have a very busy day before them." The council members left.

The oath of office has been dropped from the council's program. A signed pledge to perform its duties loyally was substituted.

BRIGHTWOOD CITIZENS OPPOSE MERGER PLAN

Action of Advisory Council on Pact Is Denounced by Association.

FOUR DELEGATES SCORED

Members of the Citizens' Advisory Council on Thursday denounced the Wilson merger plan and so-called "putty" delegates in the Federation of Citizens Associations who find congenial and lucrative employment in its service, came in for scathing denunciation at the hands of the Brightwood Citizens Association, in resolutions adopted last night at a meeting of the body at 5718 Georgia avenue northwest.

The resolution condemning four members of the council was adopted following a speech by William McK. Clayton, former utilities chairman of the federation, who charged that the council vote was the result of a lobby, and further asserted that its members had been "reached" in some manner. When George F. Williams objected to "implication" of Clayton's charges, Clayton declared that he did not mean they had been "reached with money."

While lauding William A. Roberts and Tracy Campbell, for their votes against the "North American Wilson merger subsidy," the resolution, which was adopted unanimously, lamented the votes of George R. Wages, Thomas E. Lodge, Joseph L. Gannell and Charles I. Stengle.

"This merger," the resolution read, "appears to be a one-sided affair, lower wages for motormen and conductors, excessive salaries for general officers, abnormal dividends and higher salaries for the board of directors."

A subsequent resolution adopted declared public opinion in the District 99 per cent opposed to the Wilson agreement.

"We denounce the lobby movement by the Federation of Citizens Associations, for the car riders of the District, for the gross greed of their exploitation, for the cheap demagoguery of their attempt to gain a gift of money and philanthropy for the mean methods employed by them to purchase support for their merger plan."

The trade against the proposed merger plan was launched by Clayton following an attack on Federation delegates retained by public service interests. His resolution asking that no delegate "seek or accept employment by any public service corporation operating in the District under the control and supervision of the Public Utilities Commission, in behalf of which the support or vote of the body is solicited or sought by that corporation," was unanimously adopted. Clayton termed the merger "a merger of the North American Co. by and for the North American Co."

Safe Defies Thieves, Who Purloin Lunch

Lunching on a can of sardines and a bottle of ginger ale as they deliberated over the problem of opening a safe at the grocery store at 830 Louisiana avenue northwest, burglars yesterday morning gave up in disgust when the stout door resisted their efforts.

Dropping a meat cleaver with which they attempted to pry into the box, they gathered up fifteen packages of chewing gum and departed.

Macomber Estate $138,000.

Edward A. Macomber, who died March 14, left an estate valued at more than $138,000, according to the petition for letters testamentary filed yesterday in Probate Court by Henry S. Mott, the executor. The estate includes premises 2107-09 H street northwest and 2133 Pennsylvania avenue northwest. The deceased was survived by a widow, Mrs. Nancy J. Macomber, and two sons, Raymond E. and George R. Macomber, who are the sole heirs-at-law.

CHAMBER EXPERTS AND MILLS IN CLASH ON TAX ESTIMATES

United States Group, at Senate Hearing, Insists on Cut of $400,000,000.

3-HOUR BATTLE HELD IN ROOM OF COMMITTEE

Undersecretary Challenges Opponents to Show Wherein Treasury Figures Err.

(Associated Press.)

Presenting again its demand for a $400,000,000 tax cut—double the amount proposed by the administration—the Chamber of Commerce of the United States encountered a violent attack from Acting Secretary Tull, of the Treasury, yesterday at one of the liveliest sessions of the Senate finance committee in recent years.

For three hours Mills and the chamber's tax experts battled across the committee table, with committee members throwing in occasional wallops for each side, the Republicans standing by the administration and Democrats generally supporting the chamber.

Even on the basis of Treasury estimates that a surplus of only $212,000,000 was in prospect for next year, the chamber argued that the $400,000,000 cut could be made by applying about $160,000,000 to be collected in interest from foreign governments on account of war debts to tax reduction rather than debt retirement and by carrying over some of this year's prospective $400,000,000 surplus to next year.

Calls Proposal Unsound.

Mills countered that this not only would retard the regular program for retirement of the $18,000,000,000 public debt but would necessitate the Government terminating its lifetime policy of closing its books at the end of each fiscal year and he insisted this was "unsound."

Much of the argument, which grew quite heated at times, revolved about the Treasury's estimate of income and outgo for next year. Every now and then Senator Simmons, of North Carolina, ranking Democrat on the committee, recalled that always in the past the administration has "greatly underestimated" the prospective surplus for the Government, the chamber touched on that with some emphasis.

Secretary Mills admitted this but challenged the chamber or any one to show where the estimates for next year were wrong. He said the statement of the chamber yesterday on behalf of the chamber had sought to show that the estimates on income-tax returns for next year and on back tax collections were the same as the chamber had originally estimated.

Rebuked by White House.

The chamber and the administration have been at swords points for several months, particularly over the Government's fiscal program, and recently the organization drew a rebuke from the White House for its efforts in behalf of tax reduction and larger appropriations at the same time. The row broke in the open yesterday as Secretary Mills rushed to the Capitol upon hearing of the plea of the chamber before the finance committee. He was granted an opportunity to reply.

Felix McWhirter, of Indianapolis, read the argument of the chamber for the $400,000,000 reduction program, but gave way to John Redpath, in charge of the efforts of the organization who drafted the program, and he and Mr. Mills then went at it with vigor. At one point in Mills' reply Redpath leaped to his feet and shouted "That is not true." Mills had described the manner employed by Redpath in making his estimates on prospective income.

FLIGHT OF BREMEN IS FIRST WESTWARD OVER NORTH ROUTE

Three Planes Were Lost in Previous Efforts to Fly to America.

VOYAGE TO THE EAST COVERED BY 7 AEROS

Unsuccessful Attempts to Reach Europe From This Side Total Three.

New York, April 13 (A.P.)—The German plane Bremen is the first to complete the perilous westward passage across the North Atlantic.

Three other planes, carrying five men and two women, vanished into the ocean here attempting the westward flight and never were heard of again.

The three previous attempts: Capt. Charles Nungesser and Maj. Francis Goll, attempting a flight from Paris to New York, took off May 8, 1927, in the White Bird.

Princess Lowenstein-Wertheim, Capt. Leslie Hamilton and Frederick Minchin, attempting a flight from Upton, England, to Ottawa, Ontario, took off August 8, 1927, in the St. Raphael.

Capt. Walter R. G. Hinchcliffe and the Hon. Elsie Mackay, attempting a flight from Crofton Aerodrome, England, to New York or Philadelphia, took off March 13, 1928, in the Endeavor.

Seven Planes Fly East.

Three planes, all manned by Americans, made the eastward flight to Europe from this country and two British and two American fliers crossed the North Atlantic from Newfoundland to Ireland and England. Three planes were lost in the attempt.

The successful flights: Capt. John Alcock and Lieut. Arthur W. Brown, from Newfoundland to Ireland, starting June 19, 1919.

Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, in the Spirit of St. Louis, from New York to Paris, starting May 20, 1927.

Clarence D. Chamberlin and Charles A. Levine, in the Columbia, from New York to Germany, starting June 4, 1927.

2 Hills and Bare Plain Comprise Greenly Isle

(Associated Press.)

Greenly Island is a tiny speck near the mouth of the Strait of Belle Isle, on the northwest coast of Newfoundland. Its bulk consists of two hillocks, one 85 feet high, the other 63 feet, joined by a barren plateau. A large fishing establishment operated by Canadian interests is located there.

Its southern coast is a bare-faced rock. To the north the coast is rocky and bold. The island lies nearly 400 miles to the northwest of the Bremen's plotted course over St. John's, Newfoundland.

The island is at the mouth of Blanc Sablon Bay at the western entrance to the Straits of Belle Isle, at the exact boundary line between the Canadian and Newfoundland sections of Labrador. It would take the fliers weeks to travel along the seaboard to Quebec.

flight from Old Orchard, Me., to Rome, took off September 6, 1927.

Capt. Terry Tully and Lieut. James Medcalf, Canadians, in Sir John Carling, attempting flight from Harbor Grace, Newfoundland, to Crofton, England, took off September 7, 1927.

Mrs. Francis Grayson and three companions, lost between New York and Harbor Grace, Newfoundland, on first leg of flight to Crofton, England, left New York December 23, 1927.

BYRD PRAISES FEAT OF BREMEN'S FLIERS

New York, April 13 (A.P.)—Commander Richard E. Byrd, North Pole and transatlantic flier, praised the crew of the monoplane Bremen tonight when he learned of reports that the plane had landed at Greenly Island.

"Great for Germany and Ireland," he said. "I hope they can do it. I don't know just how long it took them to get across, but their distance through the air going from New York to Ireland is at least 600 miles farther than going from west to east, due to adverse wind conditions."

"They were a most remarkable feat and shows the great courage and skill of the three fliers. Their landing must have been hazardous because they knew good landing places up there are scarce. Again they are to be congratulated for landing safely."

Warm Welcome Due In U. S., Says Davison

(Associated Press.)

On the basis of reports that the German plane Bremen, piloted by Baron G. von Huenfeldt, Assistant Secretary Davison, of the War Department, issued this statement last night:

"I hope that the reports of the Bremen having reached this continent are true. It would seem a pity if the fliers had been lost, as they have added to the ranks of those who have attempted to conquer the Atlantic in westward flight. I am sure that we in this country will give the heroic fliers a warm and enthusiastic welcome."

IRISH AIR OFFICER'S WIFE IS OVERJOYED THAT CREW IS SAFE

President of Free State, in Message, Voices Pride in Ireland's Part.

FALSE LANDING STORY SETS ALL DUBLIN WILD

Wife of Capt. Koehl Waits in Newspaper Office for Authentic News.

Dublin, Saturday, April 14 (A.P.)—Confirmation of the report that the crew had landed on Greenly Island was telephoned at 2:45 o'clock this morning to Mrs. James C. Fitzmaurice, wife of the Irish Free State President, by the Associated Press.

The first information they had received indicating that the report was correct.

"Thank God! Oh thank God!" said Mrs. Fitzmaurice, her voice trembling with emotion.

There was a long pause, then she recovered her composure and talked about the flight.

"They must have gone far out of their course," she said. "I saw a map with the route marked on it before they left, and they planned to be over Newfoundland by 6 o'clock Friday morning."

President Cosgrave sent the following message through the Associated Press:

"We are very glad that the three brave men have landed safely. We are very proud that the first successful attempt to cross the Atlantic westward from Europe has been made from Ireland, and that a commandant of the Irish Air Force should be associated in the great enterprise."

"I consider it a splendid achievement," said Gen. O'Duffy, chief of the Irish Guard. "It was a combination of German thoroughness and Irish courage. Ireland in the future will be the center of aerial commerce between the Old and New Worlds."

Officers Remain Up.
Mrs. Fitzmaurice had been up all night awaiting definite news although earlier in the evening she was taken to a theater by friends in the hope that her anxious thoughts might be temporarily distracted.

"Pat," the 8-year-old daughter of the Fitzmaurice family, was tucked between the sheets at 8 o'clock on bedtime, and slept as if her father never even had been an airplane.

Out at Baldonnell Air Force high government officials, army officers and representatives of executive departments waited all night for news. Among them were Gen. Duffy and Gen. Hogan, chief of staff of the army. Only a few of the officers of the air force went to bed until the report of the crew's safe landing.

In the city, while nearly all of Dublin had retired laboring under the misfortune that the Bremen had reached her goal, it later became known that this report was unfounded and newspapers were beset with inquiries. Despite a steady rain, crowds gathered around the bulletin boards and held their places for hours.

False News Stir Dublin.
Dublin throbbled with excitement earlier in the night over an erroneous report published in some newspapers that the Bremen had landed at Baldonnell. The news spread through the whole countryside and was even sent to President Cosgrave and Mrs. James Fitzmaurice. Then, just as word began to circulate that the report could not be substantiated, there came an announcement that the Bremen was safe on Greenly Island. The result is that even as late as 10 o'clock tonight, everybody in the streets of Dublin believes the flight was successful.

Streets were jammed and such crowds surrounded newspaper offices and moving picture theaters that it was almost impossible to approach them. One Dublin newspaper came out with an edition announcing the actual arrival of the plane in New York.

Mrs. Koehl Rejoices.
Berlin, Saturday, April 14 (A.P.)—Mrs. Herman Koehl's voice shook with emotion as she expressed thanks to the Associated Press this morning for the first news of the landing of the Bremen on Greenly Island.

"You can not imagine what a load you have taken off my mind," she said. Mrs. Koehl, wife of the Bremen's pilot, kept wild throughout the night in the editorial rooms of the local Anzeiger.

The population of the German capital retired last night uninformed that it had been misled into believing that the Bremen belonged to the honor of the first airplane crossing of the Atlantic from east to west. It was almost midnight before authentic word became known that reports of the safe landing of the plane on Long Island were erroneous.

The misleading information caused tremendous enthusiasm in all public resorts, in hotels, theaters, cinemas and on the streets. The word was broadcast from radio stations, and some of the evening papers announced it as news and printed it with congratulatory comment.

FLIERS ON LABRADOR ISLAND AFTER FLIGHT ACROSS OCEAN

observer, figured that the craft was the long-awaited plane.

Anxious watchers along the coast scanned the skies for a sight of the plane, but to no avail. The great wireless stations failed to pick up word of her from ships or shore points. During the day there were many rumors of the alrship having been sighted, but all proved baseless, and at sundown hope dwindled.

At Mitchell Field, Long Island, the objective of the plane, crowds scanned the skies all day. Nearly 3,000 persons were gathered there at one time. Reports that the plane had been sighted surged through the crowd like wildfire at various times. But as each rumor was run to earth despair seized the watchers, replacing the earlier buoyant hopes of success.

New York, April 13 (A.P.)—The North German Lloyd announced tonight receipt of a wireless message from Baron von Huenfeldt, one of the crew of the monoplane Bremen, confirming the safe landing at Greenly Island, Labrador. Termination of the flight was necessitated by exhaustion of fuel, the baron reported.

The message was: "Made a safe intermediate landing on Greenly Island necessitated by lack of fuel and strong head winds encountered on way."

(Signed) "VON HUENFELD." Plane May Go to Rescue.

Fred Melchior, representing the Junkers Co. in America, announced tonight that if developments warranted he would fly the Junkers C-38, sister ship of the Bremen, to Greenly Island to aid the crew of the German plane.

Melchior said he would await further details before deciding definitely whether to attempt the rescue. He said it might be that he could carry repair parts and supplies to put the Bremen in condition to continue her flight to New York.

Hertha and Erhard Junkers, daughter and son of the designer of the Bremen, who spent the day at Mitchell Field, prepared to go with Melchior in the C-38 to meet and escort the transatlantic plane, were jubilant when reports that the Bremen had landed safely were received.

First Word From St. John's.
St. John's, N. F., April 13 (A.P.)—An unconfirmed report that the German plane Bremen was at Greenly Island near the western entrance to the Straits of Belle Isle was received here tonight at 6:30 o'clock, Eastern standard time, from the radio operator at Point Amour, Labrador.

The message received here was as follows: "Point Amour—German plane at Greenly Island. Weather good. Thick fog. Three men on board. Barrett is the radio operator at Point Amour, on the southern tip of Labrador, and is in charge of the station. He maintains a small station in its coastal chain for the protection of the fisheries."

The message was received here by J. J. Collins, superintendent at St. John's for the Marconi Wireless Co. Barrett is the operator at the Marconi station at Point Amour, which is about 20 miles distance from Greenly Island.

Officials of the Newfoundland marine and fisheries department said tonight that if the plane has landed at the island and is unable to take off again it will be necessary to send a motor launch from this port to take the fliers off.

Philadelphia, Pa., April 13 (A.P.)—A wireless message addressed to London Times and believed to have been sent by one of those aboard the German plane Bremen, stating that a safe landing had been made on Belle Isle, was picked up tonight by an operator of the Reading Railway. The message was: "Landed Belle Isle 6:06 Atlantic time. All well. Unaided."

Reading operator was unable to decipher the signature to the message. Officially told at Ottawa.

Ottawa, Ont., April 13 (A.P.)—Applause broke out in the House of Commons tonight when the safe arrival in Canadian territory of the monoplane Bremen was announced. Government members were up in order that the announcement might be made.

When asked tonight if the government was to send aid to the airman en route to the Straits of Belle Isle, Minister of Defense, said: "We'll have to know more of conditions and discuss the matter with

Dr. William J. Showalter, assistant editor of the National Geographic Magazine, will address a meeting of the congregation on Thursday evening on the topic, "Evolution and Religion." Tomorrow at 5:30 o'clock Miss Lois M. Kugler, director of religious education, will lead a discussion of the Young People's Forum on the subject, "Peace and War."

Dr. John O. Knott Will Give Lecture

The possibility of an acquaintance-ship having existed between Moses and King Tutankhamen will be discussed in a public lecture by Dr. John O. Knott, Egyptologist and Bible authority, on Wednesday night in the auditorium of the Y. M. C. A. Building, 1736 G street northwest. The lecture, entitled, "King Tut and Moses," will be illustrated with pictures depicting the life and civilization of the days of the ancient king. Dr. Knott was one of the four Americans who were present when the sarcophagus lid was lifted from the mummy of King Tutankhamen.

Rally Will Be Held By Walther League

The annual rally of the Walther League in the Capital zone will be held tomorrow afternoon in Christ Lutheran Church, New Jersey avenue and Morgan street northwest. More than 100 members from nearby Maryland will attend the service. A special service at 2:45 o'clock will open the rally. The Rev. O. A. Sauer, of Richmond, Va., will preach the sermon. The meeting will be followed by a luncheon, a sightseeing tour of the city will be made.

Covenant Players To Perform Tonight

The young people of the Church of the Covenant will present a play, "The Boy Who Discovers Easter," by Elizabeth McFadden, in the auditorium of the Young Woman's Christian Association Building, Seventeenth and K streets northwest, tonight at 8:15 o'clock. The cast includes Vernie Barrett, Muriel Arnold, Marjorie McArthur, Wise, Harvey Greuzeberg, Alfred Barrett and William Norwood. The play is being produced under the direction of Miss Jessie McElhiney and Miss Helen L. Lyon.

St. Matthew's Church Plans Fund Drive

A building campaign, with the purchase of a site and the erection of a new church building, which is the aim, is being planned by the congregation of St. Matthew's Lutheran Church, which conducts Sunday worship in the Home Theater, Thirteenth and C streets northeast. The campaign will be launched on April 15, at 11 A. M.

TEACHERS FILE TEST SUITS FOR BACK PAY

Five of 414 Ask Adjustments, Which May Cost District About $290,000.

Five of the 414 schoolteacher pay cases, which may cost the District government about $290,000, were presented to Judge James A. Cobb, of the Municipal Court, yesterday by Paul E. Lesh, counsel for the teachers, and were taken under advisement. The teachers sued for back pay, which they contended was due by reason of salary adjustments recently made by Congress. The teachers' union, which is the National Education Association, is represented by the teachers.

The five test cases in which testimony was taken of those of Modelling Padgett, who demands $300; Marion A. Newman, who demands $300; Edna B. Shilton, who demands $300; Edith Ely, who demands $300; and Flora G. Steinberg, who demands $300.

Shortly after Congress passed a law providing salaries an organization was formed by the teachers which waited upon the Commissioners and asked that the law be complied with as they understood it. The organization then appealed to J. R. McCall, Comptroller General, who stated that he was interested only in overpayments and not underpayments. Assistant Corporation Counsel Francis H. Stephens opposed Mr. Lesh. About 50 of the teachers attended the hearings.

Baptist Ministers to Meet. The Baptist ministers of Washington and its environs will meet in the Baptist Church of Rockville, Md., on Monday for a conference on church matters. The Rev. William E. LaRue, pastor of Takoma Park Baptist Church, will preside. The Rev. Homer C. Conner will deliver the principal address. The Rev. B. M. Osgood, pastor of the Rockville church, will be host to the ministers at a dinner at the conclusion of the conference.

$20,000 Damage Suit Filed. The Washington Railway & Electric Co. was sued yesterday in Circuit Court for $20,000 damages for alleged personal injuries by Louis E. Barnard, 67 Randolph place northwest. Through Attorneys Long & Merriell, the plaintiff says that on September 30, 1927, a street car collided with a Postoffice Department truck on which he was riding at Seventh and Monroe streets northeast.

TODAY'S PREMIERES ON THE LOCAL SCREENS

Saturday's New Shadow Dramas

RIALTO—George Sidney, in "We Americans."

"We Americans," said to be one of the most notable pictures recently produced, is having its first Washington showing at the Rialto this week. It is a picturization of the famous stage success of the same name by Herbert Gropper and Mark Seigel. It deals with tragedy, drama and humor surrounding the great American melting pot of humanity.

A Russian, a German and an Italian family, who have come to America to settle in New York's lower East Side, do not understand the rapid assimilation of new customs on the part of their children. Levine drives his daughter, Beth, from home, and the three families, acting on the advice of a school teacher, go to night school to become Americanized.

War is declared on Germany. Pete Albertini and Phil Levine enlist. So does Hugh Bradleigh. Beth's aristocratic sweetheart, Phil is killed, saving Hugh, and Pete loses a leg. After the war Pete returns to Sarah Schmidt and Hugh goes to Beth's East Side home. His parents follow, not approving of the match. But to go on would spoil the enjoyment of the spectacle. The denouement is of rare beauty and happiness, raising the picture to the heights of art.

The cast of "We Americans" includes George Sidney, Patsy Ruth Miller, George Lewis, Eddie Phillips, Beryl Mercer, John Boles, Albert Marshall, Michael Visaroff, Daisy Belmont, Rostia Marstini, Andy de Vise, Flora Brantly, Kathlyn Williams, Edward Martindel, Josephine Dunn, Jacob Bleifer and a host of others.

Rox Rommell, conducting the Rialto Concert Orchestra, plays for the theme "Ach, Du Lieber Augustin," which he has clothed with his own arrangement.

A scenic, "So This Is America," and International Newsreel are added auxiliary films.

EARLE—Rod La Rocque in "Stand and Deliver."

A colorful screen play and an even more colorful stage presentation are the companion attractions at the Earle this week. The screen feature is "Stand and Deliver," which features Rod La Rocque in the role of Roger Norman, a wealthy young Englishman, who joins the Greek cavalry in quest of adventure. The stage presentation is the first of the productions from the new Stanley Crandall America Studios, under the direction of Joe Plunkett, managing director of the Mark Strand Theater, New York. The title of the new offering is "Around the Clock," and it takes several Broadway stars, led by Jack Pepper, master of ceremonies. The three Co-Eds, Lady Eden Mel, the Kaufman Girls, Mary White, Morosco and Daniels and Maxina Hamilton.

"Stand and Deliver," which Ronald Crisp directed, is a story of modern Greece, played against a background of the banditry which seriously threatened that country shortly after the World War.

While Rod La Rocque captures the stellar honors, Lupe Velez, his leading woman, who achieved a triumph in "The Gaucho," also gives a noteworthy performance. Miss Velez, a comparative newcomer to the screen, has become one of the most talked of personalities in the motion picture world. She is, in fact, the bandit chief, who has an excellent role, as have Louis Natheaux and Clarence Burton.

The program will be augmented by several short reels and a technical presentation of the work of the UFA studios is said to be apparent in the handling of the picture.

The feature picture will be surrounded on the program by the usual array of distinctive short subjects.

BAND BOX—"The Last Moment."

Washington's newest motion picture theater, the Band Box, opening on Saturday, April 14, with "The Last Moment," one of the outstanding pictures of the month, as its featured offering, is attracting interested attention.

While the Band Box Theater is situated on U Street, between Fourteenth and Fifteenth streets, it will not be a neighborhood house, but will follow a policy of presenting only such pictures as make a special appeal to the more sophisticated and critical type of audience. Both the finer Hollywood products and the exotic and sometimes macabre films now being produced in Europe will be presented in a balanced sequence of programs.

"The Last Moment" is acknowledged in New York as leading the six best motion pictures of the month and has been termed the most stimulating experiment of the season in its fresh and unusual handling of both photographic and psychological values. It is based on the theory that as a man grows the high lights of his career flash through his consciousness. Beginning and ending with a flash of dark bubbles rising to the surface of a lake, the entire picture presents the effect of a dream interlude, not quite real, but holding a strange power.

pretty Marcelline Day and James Murray.

The stage attraction is John Murray Anderson's latest production, "Knicks" in which "Lesley Eddy, master of ceremonies and his Palace Orchestra are featured, aided by the Foster girls in new dance ideas; Mildred and Muriel Lee as exponents of syncopated steps; Lora Hoffman, prima donna soprano; Pasquali Brothers in an acrobatic novelty, "The Silver Gondola," and a comedy riot with Winfield and Milk, "The Chinaman and the Coon."

Harry Boles and his Palace Orchestra, short subjects and the M-G-M Newsreel complete the program.

METROPOLITAN—Harold Lloyd in "Speedy."

Harold Lloyd will again be the major attraction at the Metropolitan Theater this week in his latest and greatest comedy, "Speedy," which has been held over in response to the many requests from satisfied patrons who have asked that it be shown again this week so that their friends may see it and that they themselves may see it again.

In "Speedy" Harold Lloyd has again succeeded in surpassing his previous successes. As typical of all Harold Lloyd productions, entirely new and highly humorous situations and gags have been injected.

"Speedy" is everything the name implies. It is a fast moving story which keeps the audience on edge every minute. The dyes in the wool fan may assume there is nothing now left in the movie craft that would serve to amuse a novelty, but in "Speedy" that fan is due for a most welcome surprise. Harold Lloyd introduces a new leading woman in this comedy. She is Ann Christy, whose work promises soon to put her on the star list. Added short reels and orchestra.

COLUMBIA—Eleanor Boardman, in "The Crowd."

King Vidor's "The Crowd" is playing a second week at Loew's Columbia. The picture, directed by the man who made "Big Parade" a story of every day life concerning the millions that make up the American middle class.

Eleanor Boardman and James Murray have the leading roles in the production. John and Mary, care-free youngsters, marry without a thought of the future and there ensues the following sequence: Niagara Falls and brief rapture, work and formless ambition, a cheap flat and leaky plumbing, drudgery and quarrels, two babies and the dreary pleasures of grubbing picnics and shows, a baby's death and frantic grief, worry, rebellion and the lesson that they learn.

The M-G-M newsreel, other short subjects and the Columbia orchestra under the direction of Claude Burroughs rounds out the bill.

LITTLE—Emil Jannings in "The Loves of Pharaoh."

One of the most interesting and at the same time least-known characterizations of Emil Jannings is the feature of this week's attraction at the Little Theater, "The Loves of Pharaoh." The picture, which has been discovered by the Motion Picture Guild and brought back for one week.

"The Loves of Pharaoh" is described as a weird historical romance, dealing with that period of ancient Egyptian history that tells of the domination of the Israelites by the Pharaohs. Great temples and massive scenes are used in the development of the atmosphere of old Egypt, while the technical perfection of the work of the UFA studios is said to be apparent in the handling of the picture.

The feature picture will be surrounded on the program by the usual array of distinctive short subjects.

GRAVES IS VERSATILE PERFORMER

Ralph Graves, who has the unique distinction of being both author and leading man of Warner Bros. "A Reno Divorce," starring May McAvoy, coming to the Fox Theater today, was born and educated in Cleveland, Ohio.

His first stage appearance was in 1917 with Jessie Bonville in "The Man on the Box," when he played the part of Col. Anselmy. His entry into the cinema world was in 1918 with Mary MacLane in "Men Who Have Made Love to Me."

He appeared for Esanay in "Sporting Life," "Dream Street," "The White Heather," "Kindred of the Dust" and "Come On Over." He played in 24 Mack Sennett comedies and was prominently cast in "Blarney" and "Alias the Deacon."

He directed "Kid Sister" and "Side-walks of New York" and both wrote and directed "Rich Man's Son" and "A Reno Divorce," playing the lead opposite Miss McAvoy in the latter.

Watch Your Step!

The Fox Theater has a system of checking up on what the patrons think of the show. Each usher nightly is supplied with a printed form on which he reports to Managing Director S. J. Siebbins comments overheard in the lobby as the patrons are leaving the theater. Mr. Siebbins studies these reports, be there many or few.

An Old-Timer.

George Sidney, who plays the leading role in "We Americans," which is being screened at the Rialto this week, has a record that may never be broken by any other actor. He played the same role in "Busy Lizzie" for fifteen years, from 1901 to 1915. He also played with Douglas Fairbanks and Louise Dresser on the stage before any of them had thought of going into pictures.

MELTING POT THEME GREAT FOR PICTURE

A deep, penetrating drama surrounding the struggles of immigrants in America's melting pot is the theme of "We Americans," which is the feature picture at the Rialto this week.

Carl Laemmle, president of Universal Pictures Corporation, himself an immigrant more than 40 years ago, has always been interested in the Americanization of Europeans who come to live in this country. For years he had been searching for a story which might aptly and convincingly portray the love for the United States which is the common heritage of hyphenated Americans.

Recently while he was in New York, Laemmle went to a theater where he saw the play, "We Americans," by Milton Herbert Gropper and Mark Seigel. This was the story which Laemmle had always visualized as the perfect presentation of this problem. The leading characters were immigrants who adopted the new country only to see it embroiled in war with the Fatherland. The play was filled with dramatic romance, properly arranged for the stage and ideal for the screen.

Laemmle immediately sent for the authors and purchased the film rights of the play for a huge sum. He assigned the direction of the picture to Edward Sloman, who made dramatic successes out of "His People" and "The Foreign Legion."

STRANGE LAW REVEALED BY NEW PICTURE

An eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth may have its significance, but among Greek bandits it's another bandit's head in exchange for citizenship.

This is the interesting fact brought out by the research department of the DeMille studio while gathering material for Rod La Rocque's newest star picture "Stand and Deliver," which is now the screen feature at the Earle Theater.

The lawless activities of bandits in Greece, caused much concern to the authorities that they were compelled to issue an edict offering all bandits who brought in the head of another outlaw the reward of reestablished citizenship and recognition as a law-abiding citizen.

This strange proclamation led to an unusual situation in "Stand and Deliver," which Donald Crisp directed from a scenario by Sada Cowan. Lupe Velez is the bandit who is the screen feature at the Earle Theater.

HOW THOSE SPECS GOT ON SCREEN

To the many Harold Lloyd fans, perhaps, it is a mystery how their favorite film comedian adopted the use of the now famed tortoise-shell glasses. Of course no one thinks of Harold Lloyd without spectacles, yet the screen comedian never uses them when he is not cavorting before the camera.

In conversation recently with a representative of a New York daily, when Lloyd was in that city with his company making scenes for his newest picture, "Speedy," now on the screen at Grandall's Metropolitan Theater, he made known just how he happened to come to use the spectacles.

It was when I was an extra almost fifteen years ago," he told his interviewer, "that I became infatuated with the ambition to portray a role on the screen which would stamp that character as official, and would be thought of as an individual itself. I had made several one-reelers, and through a good stroke of fortune, became associated with Hal Roach, who at that time was just beginning to make something of himself as a producer of comedies.

"We cast about for a character, and used an exaggerated make-up which was popular in those days, until finally one night I attended a performance of a stock company in Los Angeles and appearing in it was an actor who had a pair of horn-rimmed spectacles. His was not an exaggerated character, but a most natural one. There dawned on me then the idea of adopting the horned rims as part of my make-up, and doing away with the mustache, and the other accoutrements of Looney-Luke which I was popularizing at that time."

THE GREAT POLITICAL BILL.

The politics in the McNary-Haugen bill is no longer denied or disguised. The Senate passes the bill by a vote of 53 to 23, disregarding party lines entirely. A scrutiny of the individual votes reveals that most of them were cast for political purposes, with hardly a thought given to the substance of the bill itself. The majority take it for granted that President Coolidge will veto the bill; hence it did not matter whether the measure provided a slush fund of $250,000,000 or $400,000,000. To make a veto more certain, however, the Senate thought it wise to arouse Mr. Coolidge's instinct for economy by raising the slush fund to $400,000,000.

The real sentiment of senators was best shown in the vote on the Sackett amendment to strike out the provision for an equalization fee. On that division there were only 46 votes to retain the equalization fee. Thus, it appears, that less than half the Senate insists upon that feature of the bill to which the President objects the most. But some of the votes for the equalization fee were cast in order to make a veto more certain. After the defeat of the Sackett amendment the bill received several votes that could not by any stretch of the imagination be regarded as genuinely solicitous of the plight of agriculture.

The Senate majority, in short, passed a bill designed to betray the American farmer. Senators proclaimed their devotion to the farmer and then framed a bill which, if enacted, would not accomplish farm relief, and which if vetoed would enable the senators to claim that they had done everything they could for the farmer. The blame for the failure to relieve agriculture is to be laid at President Coolidge's door. If the farmers go behind Mr. Coolidge and blame Mr. Hoover for inspiring the veto, the senators should wry.

It is taken for granted that the House will pass the bill. Who is against the farmer? Who dares to risk political suicide by voting against the McNary-Haugen bill? And why should any one take such a risk, when President Coolidge can be depended upon to stand in the breach? He will save the Treasury by vetoing the bill, and in the meantime Congress will claim full credit for having tried to befriend the farmer.

There is some speculation as to whether Mr. Coolidge might not sign the bill, in view of the changes embodied in it, so that Mr. Hoover might not incur the animosity of the Northwestern farmers. It is also suggested that perhaps Congress is so genuinely in favor of farm relief that it will pass the bill over a veto. But neither of these surmises is likely to prove correct. Mr. Coolidge can not approve the new bill without espousing economic theories which he denounced as fallacies last year. He would be forced to eat his own words in which he exposed the unconstitutional features of the bill. He is incapable of resorting to such trickery, no matter what political considerations are involved in his decision. On the contrary, he will probably make his veto even stronger than before, and it is quite possible that he will make the farmers understand how they have been duped by politicians in Congress.

As for overriding the veto, such an outcome would be possible only if Congress honestly believed in the equalization fee and was honestly determined to give the farmer a special status as a beneficiary of the Treasury. The political chicanery already manifested in the consideration of the bill has shown only too plainly that many of its supporters are not actually in favor of its enactment into law. They will absent themselves rather than vote to override a veto. There is not in Congress a two-thirds majority in each house possessing the courage to pass this bill over a veto that exposes its fallacies and inequities.

So the farmer is to be fooled again, and he is to hear the plain truth from President Coolidge. Time will tell whether the "farm vote" will listen to this truth, or try to wreak revenge upon everybody who stood in the way of the McNary-Haugen bill.

HOPE FOR A MERGER.

It may be said without fear of contradiction that Washington unanimously favors a merger of its street railways properties. It is recognized generally that divided interests make for uneconomic operation and unsatisfactory service. It is fortunate that street railway conditions as they exist today are even reasonably satisfactory. There would be no interest in merging the existing companies were it not for the fact that a proper combination would improve service and make for economical operation. Whether or not the merger agreement now receiving public attention provides for such combination is yet to be decided. Undoubtedly it has good features. Probably in certain respects it leaves something to be desired.

Consideration of and debate upon the merger agreement has become most involved. It was to have been expected since the question itself is so large that clear and concise grasp of it would be difficult. President Coolidge, while not committing himself on the general plan, has indicated that he approves in principle unification of ownership in the operation of street railways, and that his approval of the plan will depend upon whether or not he is convinced that it will serve the best interest of the public, protect the interest of the bond and stock holders and increase the efficiency of service. The Citizens Advisory Council's endorsement "in principle" of the agreement and its declaration that the $50,000,000 initial rate base is "not unreasonably high," may mean a good deal, although everything depends upon whether or not its action is formally ratified by the constituent bodies.

In the meantime, Representative Hammer, of North Carolina, member of the House District committee, has announced that he will insist upon a "thorough independent investigation" of the merger plan. An effort may be made, he asserts, to introduce a merger bill toward the end of the session with an idea of "jamming" it through at the last moment with only cursory consideration. It is very improbable, however, that Congress will fail to give full consideration to merger legislation.

THE OPERA SEASON.

The announcement that the tax has been remitted from the local performances to be given by the Metropolitan Opera Company is not only welcome news to Washington music-lovers, since it means a reduction of approximately 10 per cent in the prices they will pay for their tickets, but it is also a recognition of a condition which has not been understood here as generally as should have been the case.

The Metropolitan Opera Company is brought here not for the private profit of any one, but as an educational opportunity for the Washington public, particularly the many students of music in this city. Any surplus that may be obtained from the local season will be given to a worthy local charity.

It is true that the tickets this season are higher than they were last year, but the only available auditorium is so small that there is no alternative.

The season promises to be unusually attractive, for although the seating capacity of the theater is hardly adequate for opera, the stage is so large and so well equipped that the most sumptuous Metropolitan productions can be offered, just as they are presented in New York. "Norma" has been revived this year for the first time in a third of a century, due to the lack heretofore of a soprano capable of the role. It will be a great opportunity to hear the spectacular "Boris Godunov."

A treat is in store for Washington music-lovers, and it is certain that they will appreciate the fact.

A ROCKET MOTOR.

From time to time inventors and scientists announce that they are working on so-called rocket motors that derive their power through direct application of the recoil from explosives. Such motors, theoretically, would make possible extreme simplicity of design and would affect a considerable saving of dead weight. Announcement has been made in Germany that such a motor has been perfected and proved. With it, it is said, a motor car attained a speed of more than 60 miles an hour within 8 seconds after the start.

The motor consists of a chamber, one end of which is fitted with a series of plates through which exploded gases escape slowly. Recoil from the chamber is converted into power directed to the axle of the automobile. The same motor could be installed in an airplane, where it would be particularly valuable inasmuch as it is not influenced by atmospheric conditions.

If these reports are to be believed, the world stands on the eve of spectacular accomplishment. Speeds, hitherto unthought of, will be possible. The upper atmosphere, in which an internal combustion engine will not function even though equipped with the most efficient supercharger, can be explored. Airplanes, equipped with the new lightweight and absolutely dependable rocket engine, will be able to break all existing distance and endurance records. Further demonstrations of the machine will be awaited with interest.

TOMB OF THE UNKNOWN.

Acting upon authorization of Congress Secretary of War Davis has invited architects or architects and sculptors working in collaboration to participate in a competition among citizens of the United States on a design for completion of the tomb of the Unknown Soldier in Arlington. The jury of award will consist of three architects to be selected from names submitted by the American Institute of Architects, one representative of the American Legion and one representative of the Gold Star Mothers to be appointed by the Secretary of War.

It is gratifying to realize that work on this important undertaking at last is under way. The United States is the only nation that thus far has not completed its shrine to its unknown soldier dead. Yet, in one respect, it is perhaps well that work has been delayed. There are architects and sculptors in the country who have anticipated this undertaking and meditated upon its possibilities for years. It is likely that a far better design will be obtained because of the delay than would have been obtained had the tomb been rushed to completion.

It may be taken for granted that the architecture of the tomb will be simple and severe. There should be no elaborate display in honor of America's Unknown Soldier. Perhaps it will be found possible to incorporate in the design a symbol of perpetual life, such as the flame that burns perpetually over the tomb of the unknown French soldier. He who wins this competition and gains the privilege thereby of supervising the construction of the memorial will have his name linked with one of the most important and most sacred pieces of architecture in America. This alone should cause to be submitted many worthy designs from which the committee of award will be able to select the one that most fittingly expresses America's debt to those who vanished in the war.

ANDREW JACKSON COHEN.

Nothing about the opening of the major league baseball season appears to have made quite the same public impression as the success of Andrew Jackson Cohen, selected by John McGraw to take the place left vacant on the New York Giants when Rogers Hornsby was traded to the Boston Braves. A great many recruits have made an impressive entry into the big leagues, but Cohen is the first to be carried off the field on the shoulders of his admirers.

The answer is that Cohen is the first Jewish ball player to break into the upper crust of professional baseball. The astute Mr. McGraw announced some years ago that he would not consider his career in baseball complete until he had developed a Jewish star. The reason is not hard to find. There are several million individuals of the same race residents of New York City. Until the present season, however, no Jewish ball player has ever excelled in America's national pastime. On the stage and in boxing Jews have registered numerous successes. They apparently do not possess the same flair for baseball.

Cohen was fortunate in that his first appearance was in a game against Boston and that his work outlasted that of his predecessor, Hornsby, for the day. The result was a send-off such as he could hardly have anticipated. The New York papers for two days have had room for but little else in their sports sections. No new idol was ever given a more generous welcome.

The danger to Cohen is that he will be unable to hold up under the adulation that is certain to come his way for a while. The much-heralded recruit has a harder battle than his colleague who comes along without such a fanfare of publicity. New York and the rest of the baseball world has shown its willingness to make a new idol out of Cohen, but they will turn against him if they discover that his feet are made of clay. The Giant recruit will find that being a hero is the hardest task he has ever undertaken. Here's hoping that he will make good.

PACIFIST MAIL FRAUD.

Misuse of the congressional frank is in itself no novelty, but the case now under investigation in which it is charged that funds were solicited for the National Council for the Prevention of War under the frank of a Democratic representative should be thoroughly investigated. The report on the case already made by the Postoffice Department states that the evidence submitted constitutes an unlawful use of the frank.

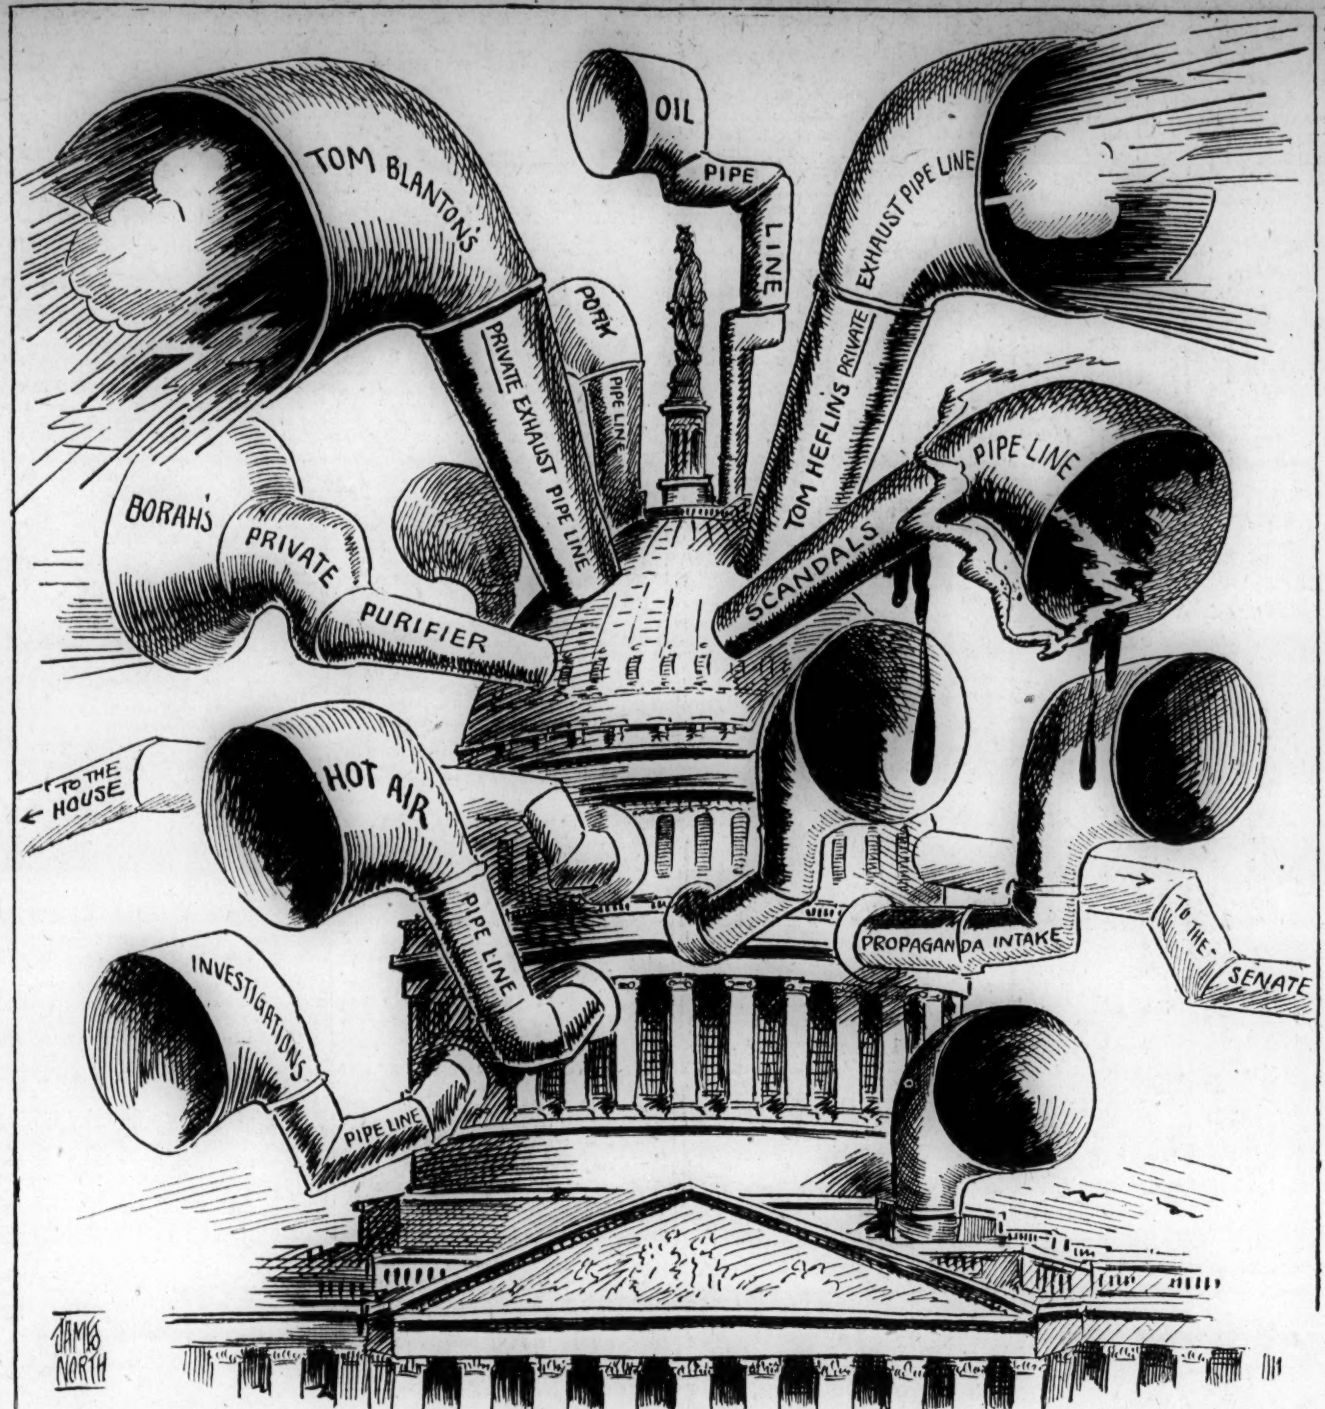

One of the documents inclosed in the franked envelope contained the statement that 350,000 pieces of propaganda against the Navy building program had been distributed this year and more than 1,000,000 last year. The House should investigate immediately and determine how much of this matter was sent broadcast at the expense of the taxpayers. It would, indeed, be a sad commentary if the money contributed by the citizens of the United States for the maintenance of the Government should have been used for the purpose of destroying its necessary safeguards.

The last place in the country where crooked propaganda should receive support is in Congress. Any abuse of the privileges which members of Congress enjoy because of their positions should be speedily curbed. The present instance is not one in which the majority of the members should hesitate to act because of any fear of offending one of their associates.

During 1927, Germany exported more than 50,000,000 motion organs, about 1,000,000 more than during 1926. Of these about 22,000,000 were consigned to the United States. Harmonicas apparently constitute more of a menace than the public would have believed, particularly in view of the fact that, judging by those the public has listened to, only a minor proportion of the instruments are of the variety that contain the full chromatic scale. Importation and manufacture of the nonchromatic type should be prohibited in the interest of instructing the musical ear of American youth.

The Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. some time ago applied to the New York State Insurance Department for permission to attach a rider to its policies limiting payments to a beneficiary of only the reserve on a policy in the event the holder died as the result of an airplane accident while a nonpaying passenger. The department refused permission, holding that the only circumstance under which a policy may be limited in this connection, aside from failure of the holder to pay premiums, is in the event of the holder's death while in military or naval service in time of war. No incident could describe better than this the extent to which the airplane is coming to be only an everyday, ordinary part of American life.

Three times a British movie firm has tried to blow up the three-masted schooner Amy in the English Channel to complete a Q-ships film. Each time they have failed because, it is believed, of defective wiring of the fuses. Old-time seamen, however, say that the trouble was caused when the figurehead was removed from the Amy. No vessel, they claim, will sink without her figurehead. If their assertion can be proved the shipping world will have been immeasurably enriched. In the future it can build all vessels with figureheads, remove them before every voyage, and send the vessels forth without insurance, and with no fear that they will come to grief.

More and Better Ventilation for Congress.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Col. Smith's "Vindication."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Was it Shakespeare or some other guy of the Elizabethan days who said "There is a divinity which shapes our ends, rough-hew them as we will"? It seems to me that Senator Walsh played the part of divinity in shaping the end of Col. Smith. The colonel wanted vindication; he wanted it bad, so he set out to get it. With a great white plume in his hat he went forth conquering and to conquer. It was a bad day for him. The voters of Illinois had a guess coming, too, and it seems as if their guess was better than that of the doughty colonel. His present defeat, however, does not make good the wrong perpetrated by the Senate in refusing him the seat to which he had undoubtedly been elected. It is more than probable his defeat last Tuesday was more owing to his connection with Big Bill Thompson than to any other cause. He was the Thompson slate and the people had it in for Big Bill, and they did him and his slate up in handsome style.

ILLINOISAN.

The World Turning Red.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: With the fearful bomb tragedy in Milan, the almost daily executions in Russia and in Mexico, the disturbances in China, and the promiscuous bomb throwings in America it looks like we played the devil in our undertaking to "make the world safe for democracy." Instead of accomplishing what we set out to do we have turned the world over to the reds.

The world was much better under the old order than it is today under the conditions we did so much to bring about. Well, experience has always been a costly teacher, and if we will only profit by the lessons we are now reaping it may be better for us. Let us rule America in justice and let the rest of the world go hang.

EXPERIENCE.

Gen. Coney's Antidepressant Bill.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I was much interested in your editorial this morning captioned "Problems of the Workless," but you suggest no cure or amelioration of the conditions, and I have observed none from the "giant" intellects in the Senate and House excepting the provisions of the McNary-Haugen bill, which, however, comprehends only agricultural relief and stops there.

Within the past week I had an accidental meeting with a man who has been held up to public ridicule because he has a remedy for existing conditions which not only includes the farmer, but the millions of the "white collar" men who are among the jobless. Some years ago this man headed an army of unemployed which marched to Washington and demanded of the Congress—which is the people—that it pass legislation relieving the intolerable condition then existing. He is here now—Jacob S. Coney—demanding that Congress—which is the people—relieve this situation or else he will again march the army of unemployed to Washington.

He gives a cure for this condition, in a bill which is now being considered by the banking and currency committee of the House. It is a 25 year non-interest bearing bond bill, the provisions of which ought to be critically analyzed by every one. I consider it the most important bill ever introduced in Congress—that is, a broad and well considered statute—since its ramifications, once enacted into law, would make industrial depressions and unemployment impossible—"a consumption devoted to be wished."

Having myself given serious study to the money question since a reporter for the Associated Press in 1892, I re-

Matrimony

By ROBERT QUILLEN

THE established customs of the race are built on a solid foundation of wisdom. They endure because countless generations of experimentation have proved them expedient.

Mated men and women are tightly bound together because all experience has demonstrated that tight bonds are best for all concerned—including society and the children.

Law and religion make the bonds effective, but common sense, gained by experience, suggested the bonds and fixed the degree of their tightness.

The worth of the bonds to society and the children is obvious, but their worth to the individuals most concerned frequently is underestimated or misunderstood.

Man gets fed up. The more he has, the less he appreciates. Give him a dozen wives and he pines for a fresh one.

The man who loves but one woman and kisses but the one lives all his days with the conviction that she alone could afford him joy. The woman kissed by one man only thinks none but his kisses could afford her a thrill.

Those who kiss promiscuously and love here and there discover that one kiss is much like another. To try many is to lose the capacity to be content with "the one." In nearly all cases, "the one" that affords continued contentment is the first one.

"Trial marriages," whatever their morality, are a tragic absurdity. There is only one "first time" to see a circus. If you can't get a thrill the first time, there's no sense in trying again.

In theory, the trial marriage tells the experimenters whether they could be content if tied together. Actually it does nothing of the kind. It is like locking yourself in your room to see how a life sentence in jail would make you feel. A trial marriage merely proves that a chained pup doesn't howl if you merely imagine he is chained.

Matrimony has faults, but it is the best scheme the race has been able to evolve in several million years of experimentation.

And all experience has shown that the best way to solve the problem of mating is to fall in love, make a public contract, and then raise a family and build a fortune as life partners.

The scheme is imperfect, but there won't be any perfect schemes until we have perfect people.

Soon daughter will be using the porch swing, and then dad can move the radio set from the kitchen back to the living room.

It's nice to see things coming up in spring, but it reminds you the ashes must come up from the basement.

Correct this sentence: "I am so lucky," said the girl: "I get my older sister's clothes when she is through with them."

ported the first bimetallic Congress ever held in the United States at the corner of Eighth and E streets northwest, in this city, then known as Concordia Hall. I studied this question and have during all the years since. Up to this time I had never met Gen. Coney, and being influenced by the ridicule of the newspapers expected to find a visionary, unsound crank who was seeking publicity. Instead I found a man, and I have met many in and out of public life, who is the greatest exponent of the money question I ever talked to. I have critically and skeptically listened to his exposition of the provisions of the bill before the committee and have failed to find a single flaw in its soundness, which, if enacted into law will make impossible any future periods of business depression and put the Government in the hands of the people which gives Congress its power.

W. J. DWYER.

TIE FICKLE PUBLIC.

The public forgets its heroes quickly, and fame is a fickle companion of the daring, according to the Pittsburgh Press. Many men who have at different times loomed large in national and international acclaim have learned the truth of that statement. Some have accepted it in bewilderment, unable to comprehend forgetfulness so shortly after they have stood in the world spotlight. Others, knowing in advance what would happen, have been prepared, and have taken the changes of life as they came, remaining themselves under all conditions.

Clarence Chamberlin, who flew from America to Germany, establishing a distance record, is an instance. While Chamberlin was in the air on his world rode on his wings, German eyes scanned the skies for the appearance of his plane, and Americans read with avidity every word concerning his flight. Chamberlin came back to his homeland to be greeted as another pioneer of uncharted airways, fit mate to the peerless Lindbergh. His photograph appeared innumerable times in every newspaper in the country. Few but who would have recognized him had he appeared in Pittsburgh at the time.

But the other morning Chamberlin sat in the waiting room of a Pittsburgh railway station, alone and unnoticed by the crowds which pushed along about their daily business. Many glanced at the man but none halted in the knowledge that there sat the pilot who had linked the United States and Germany by air. The clamor and glamour which attracts the crowd had passed on.

There is a compensating thought that recorded history is not so forgetful, and will make indelible legend of his great feat. Probably such thoughts never occurred to Chamberlin as he sat alone. He is of the real modesty of hardy men, as is Lindbergh. The latter remains longer in the glare of publicity, but reckons little of that.

There are too many remarkable accomplishments in these fast-moving times for attention to linger at high pitch long over any single individual.

"Forty Million Frenchmen Can't Be Wrong"

Nor is it likely, to paraphrase the saying, that ten, twenty or fifty million Americans can be wrong. We don't know how many people throughout America wear the nationally known things which we sell, but it runs into the millions...many, many millions.

We don't know how many Americans wear Society Brand Clothes, but it is quite beyond the six-figure mark. We don't know how many men, from Coast to Coast, wear Dobbs Hats, Hanan Shoes, Knit-tex Topcoats, Interwoven Hose, Manhattan Shirts, Stetson Hats...etc...etc....but we'd hate to have to count them...Nor is it in our power to state (with any degree of accuracy) how many women wear I. Miller Shoes, Van Raalte Hosiery and Underwear, Printzess Apparel, Phoenix Silk Stockings, Dobbs Hats and our hundreds of other quality lines...many here exclusively...But we dare say it, too, runs into the many millions.

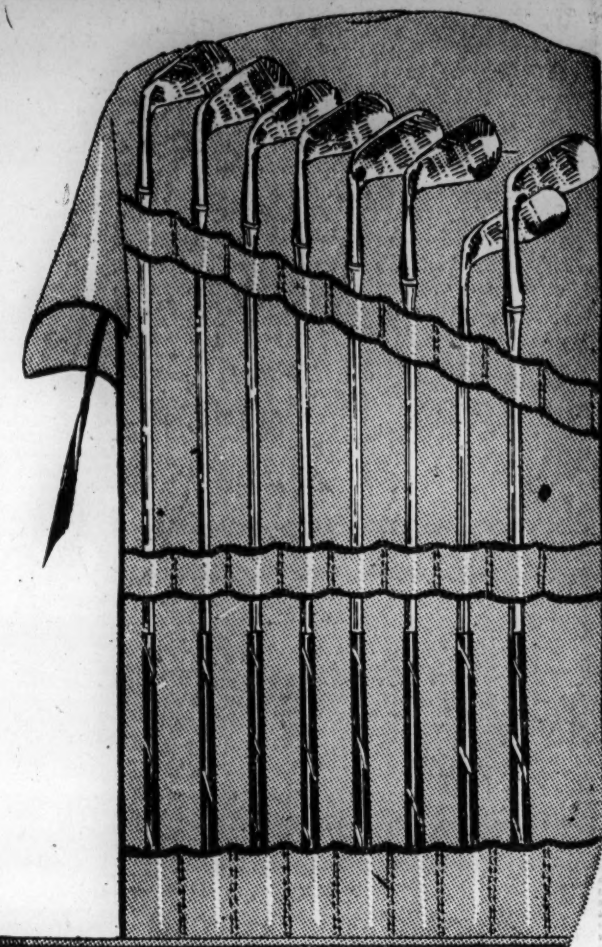

Famous names that have the confidence of the Nation. To a large extent we owe our growth to them. Some stores hitch their wagon to a star...We hitched ours to a constellation!...This fanaticism of ours to have the best known article—whether it be a sock or a shoe, a suit or a shirt—is carried out not simply in a few departments, but throughout the entire store.

The women who come here for their I. Miller Shoes can get their stockings here, too. As well as their dresses—their hats—their negligees—their toiletries....The men who buy Society Brand Clothes here can likewise under the same roof get their Hanan Shoes, and Dobbs Hats, and Phoenix Hose, and RCA Radios, and Wheary Luggage.

You hear it all around you—The Hecht Co. is Washington's up and coming store. We have the things the Nation praises—and Forty Million Americans Can't Be Wrong.

This Is Our Big Year!

Kroydon Matched Sets

will improve your game

They will also help you to play a consistently good game. Nine times out of ten the reason for erratic playing can be traced to your clubs.

Kroydon matched sets are carefully matched to conform to a series of weights, scientifically figured to the fraction of an ounce.

Finally, each set is placed in the hands of an expert, who individually checks up on balance, length, degree of whippiness, and makes certain that every club has the same "feel" as the others.

YOUR BOY AND YOUR GIRL

By ARTHUR DEAN, SC. D.

The Parent Counselor.

Dr. Dean will answer all signed letters pertaining to parents' problems with their boys and girls. Writers' names are never printed. Only questions of general interest are printed in this column. All letters will be answered by mail. Address: Arthur Dean, in care of this paper.

SWIM BUT KEEP AWAY.

My only son is 18 and in his last year of high school. He wants to be a pilot on an airplane. His father bitterly opposes and says if he is to study such a fool career he is to do it by correspondence and stay at home. I love him and don't want to see him killed, but at the same time I do think people should choose what is dearest to their hearts in their lifework. Please help.

"PERPLEXED MOTHER."

Comment—There is about as much chance to learn to fly by correspondence as there is to learn swimming by mail. Aviation is undoubtedly the coming thing. There are 47 planes in America making planes and there are several good private schools in aviation. The United States Army and the United States Navy each has a flying school.

Naturally everybody wants to fly. Even one of my best girl friends has shocked everybody by going off to a private school of aviation, getting her name and picture in the papers and announcing that she already has 30 hours to her credit. A poor, rich girl of 17 ran away from a private school, took a 30-hour aviation course and is now having the time of her life flying around the country.

Your boy should finish his high school. Then if he insists on becoming a flier he should go to one of the Government flying schools. He will get a good stiff examination before he is allowed to take the course. If he should plan to enter a university and take a full course in aeronautics, there are four or five such courses offered in America.

Later he may be killed, and he may not be. Some of us meet death on our own doorstep. A friend of mine more than 80 years of age traveled around all summer with a wife a bit older than himself, touring the country, sleeping outdoors on the ground. He had the time of his life. His children were worried that something might happen to him. Well, it did. After being injured about two weeks he slipped on a doorstep and died from his injuries.

Some good people are trying to get Lindbergh to quit flying, saying he is a great necessity to the world. He ought to keep his body unharmed. I agree that he is an asset and if he were killed it would be a great loss to this country. The chief difficulty in your case is that boy from flying, if for no other purpose than to keep away from the crowd of girl admirers, autograph friends and other fairs. I can imagine his saying to himself after one of the banquet and dress suit receptions in his honor, "Well, in about fifteen minutes from now I will be up in the air, where things are quiet and worth while."

No, mother, I, like you, would feel pretty badly if an only son insisted on flying. Perhaps Lindy's mother felt as you do. Who knows? But if my boy wants to swim I am going to take him down to the swimming hole and I am not going to say, "Now stay up in your room, my son, and read this nice book on how to learn to swim without going near the water."

OUR CONVERSATION CORNER.

"Hurray, school days will soon be over!" But don't forget the cold cruel world where "good enough" doesn't always "get by." Indications point, most decidedly, to the fact that for young people jobs are going to be mighty scarce these next eight months. Better stick to school if you are not graduating in June. If you are to have a diploma soon you'll want a position. The following help will help you figure things out. Under score the two you want, clip and send S. A. S. E.

Ten Points on Getting a Job.

Why Stick in School?

Last Last Question.

Will She Hire?

I have a crush that is driving me to drink, figuratively speaking. I have had thrills but I want another kind. In short I want to hike across the country this summer and see the problems of the younger set, we say "there are tramps, robbers and all sorts of bad men whom you will encounter." What do you say?

Answer—If I were rich I would like to distribute a million dollars to every girl in Massachusetts around your age that she might see the sunnier side of life. I would send every girl from California over to the fish wharves of Gloucester, the rocks of Marblehead and the sands of Cape Cod. Both groups crossing the continent would see enough of America and Canada, to get oriented through something besides books.

The chief difficulty in your case is that you would not like, you would ride all the way.

WIVES OF TOMORROW

By FRANCES McDONALD

Has It Come to This?

DEAR Miss McDonald: Being constant readers of your article, and knowing of your article to solve the problems of the younger set, we ask this question in the hope that you will help us.

Miss McDonald, we are two lovely young men, "New Englanders," clean living and upright in character, but in the company of young women this seems to be a hindrance rather than an asset. We are not in favor of petting, drinking or so-called "wild parties," which seem to make the other fellow so popular with the opposite sex.

Now, Miss McDonald our question is this: Should we forsake the straight and narrow path, and indulge in these "good times," in order to gain the companionship of the young ladies, or must we continue to be two lonely young men?

"BOB" and "SCUFF."

Dear Miss McDonald: I have read many of your articles which are interesting as to the different opinions, and I am sure that the same articles have confirmed my ideas of today's weaker sex. I said weaker and it fits them.

The Homemaker

By NANCY CAREY

TODAY takes care of itself more or less, for we are always beset with recipes for our Sunday dinner. First of all, our lemon tartlets, which are to be a part of this evening's meal.

Lemon Tarts.

Roll any pie pastry (the richer the better) to one-eighth of an inch in thickness and bake in individual forms. Mix together two tablespoons of flour and one cupful of sugar. Add to them slowly one cupful of boiling water and cook until mixture is clear and smooth. Stir constantly. Add one tablespoonful of butter and the yolks of two eggs beaten slightly, also the juice and rind of one lemon. Then fold in the white of one egg beaten stiff, and cook a few minutes longer. Brush the bottom of the tart crusts with egg white and pour in the filling.

Roast of Pork.

This meat, as most cookable articles, may be prepared in more than one fashion. This time we shall stick the top over with cloves, sprinkle caraway seed over it, sprinkle a bit of brown sugar over it, and bake in a covered roaster, allowing 30 minutes to the pound of meat for its cooking. If we like strained apple sauce, we do not need, of course, to pare and core our apples, but may cook them, after washing thoroughly, in a large saucepan, then when they are tender, strain the sauce through a sieve which removes the pulpy materials, leaving only the soft sauce.

Molded Spinach.

Wash one peck of spinach thoroughly and cook in boiling salted water for 20 minutes. Drain, add a third cupful of butter which has been melted, and a scant teaspoonful of salt and reheat. Force in a buttered mold and keep warm until time to serve, then place the spinach, which has been removed from the mold, on to a hot serving dish and sprinkle over the surface several teaspoonfuls of French dressing. Cover the whole with a hard-boiled egg pressed through a sieve and sprinkle with paprika.

Honolulu Chocolate Pudding.

1 cupful grated carrots.
1 cupful grated white potatoes.
4 tablespoonfuls chocolate.
1 cupful sugar.
1 level teaspoonful soda.
1/2 cupful chopped nut meats.
1/2 cupful chopped raisins.
1 cupful flour.
1 tablespoonful fruit juice.
Butter size of an egg.
Grate the carrots and potatoes and mix with the other ingredients. Steam in a covered dish for three full hours. Serve with hard sauce.

Onion Soup.

1. large Spanish or three Bermuda onions.
2. tablespoonful butter.
2. quarts beef or mutton stock.
Salt and pepper to taste.
Peel and chop the onion fine. Put the butter in a frying pan and when it is hot add the onions and stir until a nice brown. Put the stock on to boil when it boils stir the onions in. Let them simmer (just below the boiling point) for 30 minutes, add salt and pepper and it is ready to serve. (The butter is not to be added to the soup after the onions are skimmed from it. It can readily be used to season another dish requiring butter and a flavoring of onion, such as scalloped potatoes, etc.)

For a Tired Person's Comfort

WE have heard much of late, proportion, detail, etc., from the modernist. Comfort, however, appeals more than anything else to the tired business man, and for this reason, if for no more esthetic one, large, roomy wing chairs are so popular. Sketched above is a luxuriously comfortable Colonial wing chair. It is the sort into which a weary person may sink at the end of the long day and be grateful for the luxury of soft upholstery and well-padded arms.

The dainty Early American butterfly table, in walnut or honey-colored maple, is sure to be appreciated by the busy wife, for it, like the wing chair, is a fine specimen of construction and craftsmanship.

BEAUTY AND YOU

By VIOLA PARIS

PRESERVING FIRM CONTOURS.

MUSCLES that sag are most frequently due to either of two things: Physical or dietary imprudence. Let even a young woman constantly ignore the importance of rejuvenating sleep for a period of a year, and she will notice that her muscles are beginning to sag. Consequently, she will then appear older than her years. Should she fall into sluggish habits of life—ignore exercise, walking, regimens—elimination of body waste—flabby contours will be the result. Very few women are the unluckily effects of indolent eating, yet many women seem to be quite ready to stake their youth and good looks for the doubtful pleasure of eating sweets or other prohibited things. Again, a woman late herself go into some remark from a frank friend or a deprecating look of comparison from her husband makes her decide to diet. She all too often goes about this with the same lack of common sense that she displayed in allowing herself to get fat. She goes on a starvation diet that plays havoc with her health and disposition, and all the while she ignores the fact that during the war of losing process, especially, must her skin and muscles still be fed.

Exercise, regularly taken, is the most efficient corrective for sagging muscles. Those that follow are for specific parts and should be done during at least two periods of the day. In addition, a strong astringent used each time after the skin is cleansed (except around the eyes) and a nourishing substance applied at night will be a further help.

Double Chin.

Hold the head high at all times.

2. Counting one, turn the head as far as possible to the right. Count two, and return it to the front. On count three, turn the head left and on four return it to the front. Repeat many times, always keeping the chin in.

3. Stretch the chin forward, then bend the head backward until you feel the muscles under the chin stretch. Hold for a moment, repeat without jerking.

Flabby Abdomen.

1. Sit on the floor and spread your legs widely apart. Relax and roll the body forward from the hips, letting the outstretched hands extend straight in front along the floor. Drop the head forward naturally while doing this.

2. Lie on your back with arms at sides. Place a heavy book on the abdomen and try to lift it as high as possible by pushing up with the abdominal muscles. After becoming accustomed to this exercise, you may do it twenty times.

3. Stand straight, and with your arms at your sides, bend to the right and then to the left.

The Bust.

Do not attempt to correct sagging muscles in these sensitive parts by massage. Swimming, rowing, handball—in fact, any movements that make the muscles of the part work—are beneficial.

1. Swing the right arm in a complete circle from left to right about 8 times. Repeat with the left arm. Lastly, swing both arms together.

2. Raise the arms, shoulder the straight before you, palms in. Swing the arms in back of you, as though trying to touch hands, but keep the arms level with the shoulders.

Mrs. J. R.: Your questions are answered completely above.

Mary L.: "Anxious" and "Young Bride": By doing the exercises given for the bust every morning and every night you will soon notice great improvement.

Mary E. H.: All arm exercises will help you to reduce the arms. In addition to the well-known arm-bending exercises those outlined above in my advice about the bust are very helpful. Do them regularly.

PHILOSOPHY.

Old Socrates had much to say. He loved to play with words. He'd prove in a most solemn way. That halves are more than thirds. And searching the unchanging truth He sat and talked away his youth. He talked away his middle-age. And died a poisoned wise old sage.

Though Socrates is listed now. With all our honored great. I often sit and wonder how. And sigh to fly the air. While he his days in talking spent. Who earned the money for his rent? While proving like, unlike or not? Who bought the soup bone for the pot?

I see the plough boy in the field. And think more happiness they yield. Than all the brilliant smart. This world of ours has countless needs. The grain is grown by planting seeds. Little is done by spinning tails. Man builds a house by driving nails.

While wise men sit and talk and talk. The tollers everywhere. Are building roads for men to walk. And ships to fly the air. Though words may have a sweeter sound. Where'er I hear the hammers pound. I know with every blow that rings. That men are busy doing things.

King Gustav Urges Gift Cancer Clinic

Monte Carlo, April 13 (A.P.)—King Gustav V of Sweden, who is vacationing on the Riviera, will be 70 years old on June 16.

Informed recently that a national subscription had been started in Sweden in order that his country might present him with a birthday present, he replied:

"Make it cash, and we will establish in Stockholm the finest cancer clinic in the world."

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. W. A. EVANS

To the limit of space, questions pertaining to hygiene and prevention of disease will be answered in this column. Personal replies will be made to inquiries, under proper limitations, when return stamped envelope is inclosed. Dr. Evans will not make diagnosis or prescribe for individual disease.

OVERCOMING OUR HANDICAPS.

IT is possible to overcome almost any handicap. Helen Heckman had an attack of meningitis when she was 11 months of age. As happens not infrequently the meningitis left Helen entirely deaf. It was not until two years later that her parents recognized that she was both deaf and dumb. Since she could not hear and knew nothing of speech, she never learned to talk.

From that time until she was about 12 years old she was allowed to drift. She learned to talk with her hands a little, but that gained very little gain in her knowledge or in her intelligence. During this period she made queer grunting sounds, her mouth open, played with strings, was awkward, had violent emotional fits and acted generally like an idiot. In fact, it is difficult to see how she escaped a diagnosis of imbecility. I am sure most physicians and school teachers, and some specialists in children's behavior would have fastened an imbecile tag on her.

At 12, Helen had the finest piece of luck that ever came her way. She acquired a stepmother who was a hum-dinger. The stepmother took Helen in hand. She began by teaching her to make beds and do other simple household chores. This was training. It awakened interest. It began the art of learning. By means of a writing pad patiently used the mother taught Helen about things. The child acquired knowledge and interest.

The next step was to unlearn some of her bad habits, such as playing with strings and having emotional storms. Helen came the acquisition of speech. Teaching a deaf child 12 years old how to exercise the muscles of the mouth, lips and tongue to form words is no easy matter. Of course, lip-reading was an essential. The next step was to learn modulations, inflections, tones and rhythms. Then came training of the body in interpretive dancing.

The story of the evolution of this deaf and dumb child from life on a plane of apparent imbecility to a graceful, intelligent, musical and dancer is told by Miss Heckman in "My Life Transformed." Dedicated to all with real or fancied handicaps. It is a story of intelligent, patient persistence on the part of the young lady, guided by an inventiveness amounting almost to genius, on the part of her capable stepmother.

What's a handicap, anyhow, when you have the stuff in you and when you have the willingness to provide you with the right kind of a stepmother?

DRINK MILK WITH FISH.

R. M. S. writes: What do you think about the use of fish and cream at the same meal? I have been told that it is poisonous.

REPLY.

Preparing fish with cream or milk is all right, as cooks have always known. Isiah Walton gave many recipes for cooking fish. I think some of these called for fish and milk. I know of one that called for beer as dressing for fish. If Walton's beer recipe has not killed any one, the milk recipes are safe.

Mr. Work's Pointers Contract Bridge

Continuing our discussion of Contract bridge, we must remember that every Contract bid shows strength. After the bid is made, the other Major should not be bid by partner unless the take-out suit is really strong; with moderate strength, do not take out unless side support is just such bid. For example, two Hearts should be bid over partner's one Spade with the following hand:

It is admittedly a dangerous declaration, but it would be still more dangerous to pass as the combined hearts of the two hands, plus their respective Spades and Diamond strength, may be a game-going combination, but even with that Diamond strength it would be wildly unsound to jump partner's Spade bid of one without normal support. In the Diamond suit, materially weaker, the hand should pass.

Denials of one Major with the other can be made with a four-card Ace-King-Queen holding and nothing on the side, but with less strength, four-card denials should not be made. At Contract, being weak in your partner's Minor is no justification for taking it out; every Minor bid should be passed by a partner whose holding is doubtful. But when the bidder's partner is strong, whether for No Trump or in some other suit, he should make his strength; if strong only in his partner's Minor, he should jump. It is important that the overcalling partner show all the strength he holds.

Denial bids in Contract are not made, as they are in Auction Bridge, with holdings of one quick trick plus a little more to warn the partner not to continue the suit. A pass is virtually a denial because the failure to make any bid is a definite notice to the partner that the passer's hand will not be helpful. Therefore, no matter how desirable a denial may seem to be, pass not only with weakness but even with some hand strength. The Diamond strength for an Auction Bridge denial.

This subject will be continued next Friday.

ABOUT A DANCE

DEAR MADAM: I am a high school girl and am giving a dance at the Country Club. Will you tell me whether I should ask each person individually or send out written invitations? I am having 25 couples. If the latter, is it permissible to request, on the young man's invitation, him to escort a certain girl? If so, where should this be written, and will you word it for me?

K. H.

My dear girl, I don't know how to answer this. The customs of the social world are so entirely different that they have no bearing upon the matter. In the first place, no girl of your age would be sending out invitations to a dance; her parents would be doing it for her. They would send formal or informal invitations. Either a card like this:

DAMROSCH IS TO RADIO
EDUCATIONAL CONCERTSArrangement for Series Made With Radio Corporation of America.

PROGRAM FOR TONIGHT

Arrangements for a special series of 14 educational orchestral concerts, under the direction of Walter Damrosch, to be broadcast next season, beginning October 26, have been completed, according to David Sarnoff, vice president and general manager of the Radio Corporation of America.

These programs will be broadcast at 11 o'clock Eastern standard time, so that they may be heard in the schools. It is planned to use 28 stations, the blue network and associated stations, covering the entire country between the Atlantic Coast and the Rocky Mountains. Station WRC will in all probability be included in the network.

"When Mr. Damrosch came to us some time ago with a plan for inculcating a better appreciation and understanding of good music," said Mr. Sarnoff, "we were immediately impressed by its great possibilities. And the many thousands of letters recently received from teachers, parents and educational authorities, all over the country, following our three experimental lecture concerts, have confirmed our judgment."

"The time for music education over the air is opportune, because of the perfected state of radio broadcasting. The best music can now be entrusted to the microphone with the full assurance that it will issue forth from the loud-speaker in the school or the home with a true approximation of the original rendition."

Mr. Damrosch will again conduct the New York Symphony Orchestra during the RCA hour at 8 o'clock tonight. Victor Herbert's fantasy, "America," will open the program, followed by a suite of arias from Bizet's "Carmen," rearranged by a modern composer. Borodine's description piece, "A Desert Sketch From Central Asia," and the andante from Brahms' "Symphony No. 2" complete the program.

"The Fortune Teller," a comic opera in three acts by Victor Herbert, with Jessica Dragonette, soprano, singing two roles, will be presented at the Philco hour feature at 9 o'clock from WRC.

An hour of dance music by the Wardman Park Hotel Orchestra will close WRC's program.

During the afternoon a play-by-play account of the Washington-Boston game will be put on the air.

Mrs. Edith Nourse Rogers, representative from Massachusetts, will be the speaker in the Congressional Club program at 11 o'clock this morning.

Chman and Arden will furnish the dance music in the Brunswick Saturday Nighters program from 10:30 to 11:30 o'clock. Earlier in the evening Les Colvin and his "Columbians" will present a dance program.

A concert of request numbers is the offering of Station WRC at 6:05 o'clock tonight. This program is preceded by a talk by "The Radio Bug" entitled "Hints for the Listener."

Wall Street Briefs

New York, April 13 (A.P.).—The decline of $3 a ton in prices of full-finished steel sheets is spreading to other grades.

The Youngstown area, common grade, is quoted at 20 cents, at distances as low as 2.75 cents a pound, against 2.90 cents, although the more common market is 2.80 cents. Blue annealed sheets are firmest at 2.10 cents, but prices down to 2 cents are developing. Galvanized sheets are quoted at 3.75 cents, below the nominal market of 3.75 cents a pound.

Probable favorable dividend action by the directors of the company at the June meeting of directors is anticipated in the financial district, owing to the fact that the company is doing its business and higher prices are being received for finished products in the steel mill.

At the June of the two preceding years, an extra of 25 cents was declared.

R. R. Kinney Co. has had its largest Easter sales this year $745,308 for the week, against $706,228 a year ago.

An issue of $10,000,000 Central States

Electrical Corporation 6 per cent cumulative preferred stock was oversubscribed.

Industrial Corporation 6 per cent cumulative preferred stock was oversubscribed.

Activity in big buildings continues in most sections of the country, the week's total for all classes of operations being placed at $84,900,000 against $65,000,000 last year, according to figures from construction Daily reports. A group of cities total was $71,000,000.

Arrangements are reported to have been made by the city council of Boston, Mass., to take over the management of business men headed by John R. Macomber to take over minority interests in the city's power plant system, which heretofore held by F. L. Carlisle & Co. Northeastern Power Corporation and its subsidiaries. These holdings are said to comprise about one-fifth of the stock of the New England Power Association. International Paper Company has acquired a controlling interest.

First quarter profit of Eaton Axle & Spring rose to $314,000 after charges, compared with $274,853 in the first quarter last year.

Directors of Phillips Petroleum Co. and several guests including F. M. K. Smith, president of the Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey, left for the annual meeting in Bartlesville, Okla., and will participate in a section trip of the company's properties.

Stockholders of both Mavis Bottling Co. of America and Mavis Corporation, at annual meetings, approved plans for absorption of the latter by the former. The directors of the Mavis bottling company also approved an increase in capital stock from 600,000 shares to 1,000,000 shares, and a change for Mavis Corporation stock on a basis of 1½ shares for one.

The Houston Securities Co. has purchased the Southern Gas Co., which operates a pipe line system and natural gas fields in Texas and Oklahoma.

Armed, equipped and masked are formed up and operated here and there through out the country as instruments of terror used at times as instruments of terror, oppression and violence, and they constitute a continuing menace to the public peace and destructive of the public order."

Judge's Opinion Furor Disorder.

The judge's famous further said: "The fact that the police officers, through its actual operations as a vigilante force, have stirred up racial animosity between the races, have incited and encouraged riots and unlawful assemblies, which have resulted in flagrant breaches of the peace, and have caused the death of 11 persons and that such unlawful assemblies and riots have, in many instances, been committed in violation of the law, upon the part of the officers in the organization, is sufficient ground for increasing the membership of the organization."

The secret operations of the corporation's activities, and in hostility to the civil authorities, military organizations, and the government, with arms, regalia and equipment, were officers of varying rank and militancy; these officers being bound obediently to the commands of the superior officer in authority or the plaintiff corporation.

The court authorized the appointment of the principal officers of the Klan of the State men are punished for punishment and are punished and fined for their crimes. They are preferred against them and without hearing or trial, in open and flagrant violation of the Constitution and laws of the land."

After entering his order of dismissal the Court noted that the plaintiff had failed to show that the defendant probably would confer on the question of carrying the case to higher courts.

the police in Washington is not an easy one and calls for ability, fidelity and courage. It is the opinion of the Commissioners that Maj. Hesse possesses these qualities.

As soon as he was apprised of the action of the Commissioners Maj. Hesse sent home to take the news to Mrs. Hesse, who is ill and whose condition of health has been aggravated by the strain occasioned by Blanton's attacks on him.

Representative Blanton declined to comment on the action of the Commissioners. He discussed the District Court speech in the afternoon and confined himself to an attack on the newspapers for their handling of the case.

Representative Gibson (Republican), Vermont, chairman of the subcommittee that questioned Hesse, said he would submit the case to the subcommittee Monday. Until then, he said, he would have nothing to say.

EXHIBITS TO SHOW HOW GOVERNMENT PAYS FOR BETTER HOMES

Details Will Be Displayed at Exhibition Under Post's
Auspices April 22.

VIEWS WILL CONTINUE
DURING WHOLE WEEK

Principal Demonstration to Be at House No. 1, Under Instruction of Experts.

How to make a costly house pay itself in taste, beauty and practical comfort will be demonstrated in house No. 1, the $47,500 dwelling which is one of the six homes to be completely furnished in the "Home Beautiful" educational exhibit being sponsored by the Washington Post in cooperation with leading merchants, realtors and home-builders of Washington and opened for public inspection the week of April 22 to 29.

This house, which is English in type, built of brick and stands on a large lot at 3838 Cathedral avenue. It is one of several houses built in this exclusive residential section by Charles D. Sager.

The house is entered from a wide veranda, which extends around two sides of the house into a wide reception hall, from which the living room, dining room and library are entered. The breakfast room, kitchen and butler's pantry are at the back of the dining room on the first floor.

There are four sleeping chambers and two baths on the second floor all of which open into a central hall. On the third floor is a large room suitable for dancing, and two alcoves, one of which can be used as a bridge room and the other as a billiard room.

Quarters in Basement.

The servants' quarters and bath are in the basement, and the two-car garage is built under the house. To carry the illusion that this is a real home, inhabited by real people, the Stanley H. Horner, Inc., will see to it that a handsome new Buick automobile is placed in the garage.

The draperies, floor coverings, furniture and lamps in this home have been selected from the stocks of W. & J. Sloane by Mrs. R. H. Thomas, who is supervising the furnishing of this home and who is working out the details in collaboration with the interior decorating studios of W. & J. Sloane.

The silverware will be supplied by Berry & Co.; the china, glassware and bric-a-brac will be loaned by Dulin & Martin; the electric appliances and General Electric home refrigerator will be supplied by National Electric Supply Co.; pictures will be furnished by S. J. Venable, art dealer; baby grand piano, with Ampico reproducing attachment, will be installed by Arthur Jordan Piano Co.

Mrs. Thomas stopped long enough in her work to partly describe the furnishings yesterday afternoon.

Living room draperies will be made of silk damask in colors of beige, gold, copper and green. They will hang floor-length from cornices covered with velvet in harmonizing color.

Proper Rugs and Furniture.

Persian rugs will be used in this room as well as in hall and other rooms on this floor. Appropriate furniture in English design has been selected for the living room. Furniture in living room will be red mahogany in Duncan Phyfe design and draperies will be made of damask in copper color.

Master bedroom will have draperies of semiglossed English chintz in color and design suitable to the walls. Twin beds, dressing table, chest of drawers and other suitable furniture made of mahogany and satinwood will make this a beautiful room.

Another bed chamber will be furnished as a study room and will be paneled with tufted silk in orchid color. Also twin beds will be used together with dressing table, chest, boudoir chairs and desk.

The debutant's room will have apple-green organdie draperies and painted furniture. The dining room and breakfast room will be made of hand-blown chintz and the floor will be covered with a large hooked rug.

The "Home Beautiful" exhibit will be open daily from 10 a. m. to 6 p. m. beginning April 22 and ending April 29. Come as often as you please, there will be no charge of any kind.

Other units in the exhibit are located as follows:

Locations of Houses.

The six houses will be open daily from 10 a. m. to 6 p. m. beginning April 22 and continuing through April 29. You may visit the exhibit, make offers as you wish as guests of The Washington Post and cooperating merchants.

FIFTY FLEE OVER ROOFS AS POLICE BATTER ROOF

Twenty Taken as Witnesses in Spectacular Gambling
Raid in Southwest.

SKYLIGHT PROVES EXIT

A scene resembling a movie thriller was enacted at 831 Four-and-a-half street southwest yesterday afternoon when the police raiding squad, led by Sgt. O. J. Lettermann, swooped down on an alleged gambling establishment at that address. Fifty persons trapped within made their escape over roofs by an intricate route, which involved the use of secret passages and ladders. Twenty others were seized as witnesses when the raiders, after battering in vain at a 9-inch, iron-bound door, climbed to the roof and cut their way into the building through a skylight which had by that time been locked against them. Charles J. Baker was arrested, charged with setting up a gaming table.

At the first blow of the police sledge hammers, the skylight began to disgorge a stream of parrots of the place. They ran through a nearby building by means of "passages" from roof to roof and were later seen emerging from houses in the same block, having dropped through other skylights in their haste to elude the police.

Another place invaded by the raiding squad was 931 C street southwest, where after beating down three heavily barred doors, the police arrested Joseph McCreary, charged with setting up a gaming table. About 36 persons were in the establishment at the time, according to Detective William Burke of the raiding squad. Race horse slips and other paraphernalia were seized at both places, the police reported.

Additional pay for men serving on submarines was announced by Secretary of the Navy Wilbur yesterday in a message to the service. It stated that effective April 9, officers serving aboard submarines are entitled to additional pay of 25 per cent of their base pay plus longevity pay. Enlisted men serving on submarines will hereafter be allowed extra pay for such service as follows: Unqualified enlisted men, $20 monthly; chief petty officers and petty officers, first class, qualified for more than a year, $25 monthly; chief petty officers and petty officers, first class, qualified for more than a year, $30 monthly; enlisted men assigned to submarine duty, $20 monthly; chief petty officers and petty officers, first class, qualified for more than a year, $25 monthly; enlisted men assigned to submarine duty, $20 monthly.

COOLIDGE CONSIDERS OUT-OF-TOWN TRIPS

One Calls for Address by Him at Gettysburg Field on Memorial Day.

An active speaking program, involving several trips out of Washington, is being considered by President Coolidge. It became known yesterday. One of the places which he is considering visiting is the battlefield at Gettysburg, Pa., where he may deliver the Memorial Day address. If he does this, he will break the precedent established some years ago of having the President deliver the Memorial Day address at the ceremonies at Arlington Cemetery.

President Coolidge expects to visit Annapolis, Md., on May 15, when he will speak at St. John's College. He has been invited and is considering an invitation to speak at Phillips Andover Academy in Massachusetts on May 18, when that institution observes its 150th anniversary.

An invitation has been extended to the Chief Executive to go to New York May 9 and speak at the sesquicentennial celebration of the Dutch Reformed Church.

Is Congested.

While planes from Bolling Field circled and stunted overhead in mimic warfare, 1,200 regular Army troops passed in review before Secretary of State Kellogg yesterday afternoon on the ellipse in the first of a series of military exhibitions to be staged by soldiers stationed in and around Washington.

Hundreds of Government workers, just released from their labors, gathered around the edge of the great circle as the parade passed, the United States Army Band in the vanguard. Officers high in the councils of the general staff viewed the spectacle with Secretary Kellogg from his stand due south of the White House.

Led by Col. Guy V. Henry, commandant at Fort Myer, the troops included the Third Battalion of the Twelfth Infantry Regiment, under Maj. O. H. Saunders; two batteries of Field Artillery, and the Second Squadron of the Third Cavalry, under Maj. Max Murray. Capt. P. G. Ritten and his Twenty-ninth Motor Transport Company brought up the rear.

Airmen Stage "Battle."

The airmen, whose battle maneuvers over the field thrilled the watchers below for some ten minutes before the parade got under way, were led by Maj. H. C. Davidson, commandant of Bolling Field, who flew an observation ship. Charles J. Baker was arrested, charged with setting up a gaming table.

The entire parade was enacted in full view of the White House. Local troops in drills are likely to become a regular and much appreciated spectacle before summer, however, the present schedule calling for an average of two public exhibitions a week, with yesterday's as the inaugural event.

Officers who witnessed the parade from Secretary Kellogg's reviewing stand included Maj. Gen. Charles P. Summerall, chief of staff of the Army; Maj. Gen. H. O. Williams, commandant of the Marine Corps; Maj. Gen. H. Allen, chief of Infantry; Maj. Gen. B. Frank Cheatham, in charge of quartermaster, and Brig. Gen. James E. Fiebel, chief of the Air Corps.

Also on the stand were J. Selva, First Secretary to the Chilean Embassy, and J. M. Barcelo, commandant of cadets of the South American republic. Brig. Gen. Herbert M. Lor, director of the budget, watched the review as one of the throng of Government workers.

The parade indirectly brought about congestion in downtown traffic, and much confusion among motorists accustomed to parking around the ellipse, when an order was issued yesterday morning revoking the usual daily parking privileges to clear the streets for the review.

D. A. R. Is Expected To Retire Its Bonds

That the National Board of Management of the D. A. R. at its session today will recommend the retirement of the $1,000,000 bond issue floated for the Constitution Hall in 1926, was predicted last night at the Constitution Hall committee meeting of the D. A. R. in Memorial Continental Hall by Mrs. Adam M. Wyant, treasurer general.

The reason for the retirement of these bonds was given by Mrs. Wyant because of the fact that there is now more money in the treasury than the amount of the society's debt, and interest can be saved by retiring the $1,000,000 issue at this time. The thirty-seventh Continental Congress will vote on the proposition next week.

PINEY ROAD REALTY OWNERS SUE CITY

Assessments for Improvements Made by Borland Law Called Illegal.

Thirty-three property owners, whose titles are clouded by reason of illegal assessments for the improvements to Piney Branch road, filed suit in Equity Court yesterday to prevent the collection of the assessments and for the removal of the attempted liens. The assessments were for various amounts and are comparatively small. The District Commissioners are named defendant in this suit in which all of the property owners are joint plaintiffs.

Harry Sherby, 946 Louisiana avenue northwest, who paid an assessment of $2,269 under protest for the improvement of Georgia avenue in front of his holdings, filed suit in the Circuit Court to recover this amount. Others who also paid assessments under protest, are Charles J. Stern, of 441 G street northwest, who paid $2,272 in connection with his Bladensburg road property, and E. F. Droop & Sons, Inc., who complain of an assessment of $1,339 in connection with the improving of Thirteenth street northwest, and Sarah E. Pratt, of 2601 Rhode island avenue northeast, who complain of an assessment of $1,832 for improvement to Rhode island avenue, and Harry and Rose Abraham, who complained of an assessment of $1,020 against their Thirteenth street holdings.

All plaintiffs were affected by the Borland amendment which is alleged to be invalid. Attorneys Rhodes & Borchardt appeared for the plaintiffs.

BILL LIBERALIZING RETIREMENT LAW IS GIVEN TO HOUSE

Measure, Reported by Committee, Provides Resignations After 30 Years.

MAXIMUM ANNUITIES
WOULD BE RAISED $200

Salary of Any 10 Consecutive Years Would Be Basis for Pensions.

The Lehibach bill to liberalize the civil service retirement law formally was reported to the House yesterday by the civil service committee. The bill provides for voluntary retirement at the option of the employee after 30 years of service if the employee has reached the age of 60 and increases the maximum retirement annuity from $1,000 to $1,200.

The bill substitutes the divisor 40 for the divisor 45 in computing annuities and provides that the annuities shall be based upon the average salary of any 10 consecutive years of service instead of the last 10 years of service. It also amends section 6 of the present law dealing with disability retirement by requiring that the employee be retired at the age of 60 days after recovery, and substituting therefor a clause providing that after the employee has recovered he shall be appointed to some position fairly comparable to his former position within one year. It further provides that the employee shall continue to receive an annuity until he has been given such a position.

Lehibach Makes Report.

The report submitted by the bill by Representative Lehibach (Republican of New Jersey), says that the "The annuities for those who entered the service of the Government since August, 1920, and those who will enter in the future will be paid for by contributions by employees to the extent of 3 1/2 per cent of their salaries, supplemented by a Government contribution of 48 per cent of such salaries."

"Until the deficiency caused by the inauguration of this system, extending its benefits to all employees without acting contributions for periods of service previous to the enactment of the law, the Government has been contributing an additional 1.97 per cent of the salaries. This contribution by the Government, with a sufficient increase to annuities, has been estimated at $19,950,000 annually for the next 30 years."

Employees Give $28,000,000.

"The contribution by the employees is approximately $28,000,000 per annum. The increased annuities and the optional retirement feature of this bill will increase the Government contribution to about $30,000,000 for the 30-year period. Thereafter the contribution of the Government will approximate $10,000,000 per annum, while the contribution of the employees will total $20,000,000."

"Inasmuch as the retirement system at its inception was believed to be a 50-50 measure, it is urged that there be nothing unreasonable in the proposition that the Government bear somewhat more than one-half of the cost of the first 30 years, until the deficiency is absorbed, and that the employees provide for their cost of the system thereafter."
